HOOVER LEADING U. S. IN HOMAGE TO WASHINGTON

Attends Old Church at Alexandria as Part in Bicentennial.

SPEECH TO CONGRESS IS SLATED FOR TODAY

75,000 Visitors Here Join in Spirit of Numerous Programs and Rites.

The part President Hoover will play in the Nation's homage to George Washington on the 200th anniversary of his birth was begun yesterday in the ivy-hung Christ Church, in Alexandria, Va., that was the church of the First President.

The Chief Executive, with Mrs. Hoover, sat for an hour and a half in a side pew of the church that was once occupied by Washington, and listened to the services that were but a part of the tributes heard in 232,000 churches and carried through the Nation over radio waves.

After the services the President and Mrs. Hoover returned to the White House to rest for their tasks today, when they will inaugurate the nine-month Bicentennial celebration, which will begin at noon on Capitol Hill at a joint session of Congress.

Joint Session at House.

From the joint session at the House, which will be attended by the highest officials of the Government and the representatives of foreign governments, the President will move to the east front of the Capitol, where he will begin the program of the District Bicentennial Commission, at which thousands of voices will be raised in singing "America." Later in the day the President will attend celebrations at Alexandria and Mount Vernon.

The weather man has little cheery news for the crowds which are expected to attend the services at the Capitol, for last night he announced the discouraging forecast of "cloudy, and rain on Monday." The majority of the crowd of 75,000 visitors, which transportation companies estimated have arrived in Washington for the celebration, are expected to attend the Capitol exercises.

Though the services at the ancient Christ Church were the pivotal point of the religious commemoration, the spirit radiated throughout the Nation. In the Capital services were held in tribute to Washington by churches of all divergent doctrines

Akron Trip Today Will Be House Test

Commander Rosendahl to Pilot Huge Navy Craft to Capital Today.

Lakehurst, N. J., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Commander Charles Rosendahl, skipper of the Navy dirigible Akron, expressed the opinion tonight that tomorrow's test flight of the ship would result in complete vindication of the stand the Navy has taken in its defense.

The Akron will cruise to Washington tomorrow with members of the subcommittee of the House naval affairs committee on aeronautics aboard. E. C. McDonald, reserve Army officer and inspector during the ship's construction, who charged there were evidences of poor workmanship, also will make the flight.

It was partly the result of today's inspection that Commander Rosendahl made his prediction. He said none of the committee members found anything wrong and that McDonald had nothing of criticism after his inspection.

COOK GIRL DECLARED HOAX NOTES' AUTHOR

Two Messages Were Italian Telegrams Sent Herself, Consul Avers.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Boston, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—New light was shed upon the mysterious death in the Mediterranean of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, 20-year-old Boston society girl, today by G. B. Beak, British consul general here. He expressed belief the girl had sent the now celebrated hoax messages to herself.

Mr. Beak said an examination of the two messages Miss Cook received at Naples, just prior to sailing for this country aboard the steamship Chinese Prince, showed them to have been Italian telegrams rather than cablegrams as at first believed.

The messages told Miss Cook of the supposed death at Boston of her

Former Representative Seeks Senate as Wet

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Chauncey B. Little, of Olathe, former Kansas representative in Congress, said tonight he "intended to announce" in about ten days his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, and that he would make the race on a platform favoring submission of the eighteenth amendment to a vote of the people.

Little represented the Second Kansas District in Congress from 1924 to 1927. He won the Democratic nomination for governor of Kansas in 1928, but lost in the election to Clyde M. Reed.

LARGE BANKS AIDED BY BILL, GLASS SAYS

Wrong Impression Charged to Administration by Virginia Senator.

(Associated Press.)

A last-minute tussle over the legislation to expand Federal Reserve credit loomed yesterday after Senator Glass charged the administration had attempted to create an impression that all banks could not benefit under its provisions.

The Virginia Democrat said the administration was back of a move to have the Senate and House conferees extend to big banks the provision in the Glass-Steagall bill expressly providing for small banks, although the first section of the measure permits large institutions to have full advantage of the new credit facilities.

The coauthor of the measure pointed out that under the first provision of the bill a group of five banks, regardless of capitalization, can receive benefits of the credit expansion.

Oxygen Administered To John Drinkwater

London, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Oxygen was administered over the week-end to John Drinkwater, British dramatist, who has been ill for more than two weeks with acute bronchitis.

Mrs. Drinkwater said her husband's condition was better tonight, after a bad night yesterday, but that he still was in a state of great exhaustion. Sir Thomas Horder, physician to the royal family, was called in for consultation yesterday.

Swedish Prince to Marry Despite Royal Disapproval

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 21 (A.P.). Prince Lennart, a grandson of King Gustaf, started for London tonight with his boyhood sweetheart, Karin Nisswandt, to be married in spite of royal disapproval.

The romance has touched the hearts of the Swedish people and a great crowd assembled at the station to wish the pair good luck, almost smothering the bride-to-be with flowers.

After the marriage in a registry office, the couple plans a honeymoon tour of Europe under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Bernadotte. They will live in a castle on an island in Lake Constance, Switzerland.

The prince will lose his royal prerogatives and his tenuous rights to the throne inasmuch as King Gustaf has refused his consent to the marriage unless his grandson agreed to a long delay. Miss Nisswandt is not of royal blood.

Prince Lennart, 22, is the slender, serious son of Prince William and the former Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, whose marriage was dissolved in 1914. His mother is living in New York. Miss Nisswondt is the 20-year-old daughter of a wealthy industrialist of Dutch descent.

The bridegroom will be following in the footsteps of his uncle, Prince Oscar Bernadotte, who renounced his royal rights some years ago to marry Ebba Munok. His cousin, Count Folke Bernadotte, wed Miss Estelle Manville, of New York, several years ago.

POLITICAL FEUD SEEN AS GARNER ASSAILS HOOVER

HITS ADMINISTRATION CLAIMS OF INITIATIVE

Asserts Democrats Will Not Remain Passive While Opponents Fight.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Speaker John N. Garner yesterday accused the Hoover administration of violating the so-called "political truce" in Congress by claiming "all the credit for whatever is accomplished."

In a statement bristling with angry words, the Democratic leader charged that Cabinet officers and other administration spokesmen were trying to reelect President Hoover by "planting the idea that he single-handed" has put through the emergency legislative program.

"It is well enough to talk of a political truce," Garner said, "but let me tell you that the kind of truce we intend is not that the administration shall continue hostilities while we abstain from them."

Lays Down Ultimatum.

Garner said that President Hoover would be helpless without Democratic cooperation in Congress, and he then laid down an ultimatum.

If the Democrats are going to be partners with the Republicans in passing legislation to rescue the Treasury and restore prosperity, he said, then the Democrats will expect to participate in "whatever benefits accrue—political or otherwise."

Moreover, he said, the Democrats will expect the Hoover administration to accept their judgment as impartially as they accept the President's, and to refrain from accusing them of "playing politics" when they refuse to sign on the dotted line.

Accuses Hoover of Dictating.

Referring to the President's recommendation for reorganization of the Federal Government, a recommendation which the Democrats have ditched, Garner said:

"What he seeks * * * is to dictate, and nobody can dictate to the Democratic group in Congress."

The Garner statement was issued through the publicity department of the Democratic national committee, and was thus a statement of policy

It probably marks the end of the "era of cooperation" on Capitol Hill and the beginning of a political quarrel that will last until the gavel falls in the spring.

With a presidential election in the offing, Republican orators are not likely to leaven their praise of President Hoover with equal praise for the Democrats. Politicians simply are not built that way.

Blast Not Unexpected.

The Garner blast was not unexpected. That something of the kind was coming was evident at the Capitol for several weeks.

Three things served to ignite the fuse of Democratic wrath—the Lincoln Day speeches made by Republican orators the Republican claim that president Hoover was responsible for the Glass-Steagle bill to ex-

DECISIVE FIGHT NEAR AS JAPAN HURLS FULL STRENGTH AGAIN AT DOGGED CHINESE DEFENSE

INUKAI'S PARTY GETS MAJORITY IN HOUSE

Victory Is Won on Inflation Policy; Nation's Interest in Outcome Intense.

Tokyo (Monday), Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The Seiyukai party of Premier Suyoshi Inukai was leading in returns today from Japan's general election by such a margin that its leaders claimed the government had remained in power by an unprecedented victory.

The party of Japan's "Grey Fox," the 76-year-old Inukai, took over the power last December with a minority in the House of Representatives, which made the election test of its control inevitable. The returns up to midnight gave it a lead of 36 seats over the Minseito, the principal opposition.

With 160 out of the Diet's 466 seats reported, the standing was: Seiyukai, 96; Minseito, 60; others, 4.

Thus the party in power at the time of the election apparently won again, as it usually does in Japanese elections, and this time with a much-needed majority indicated.

Small Margin Expected.

Whereas a small margin had been expected, the leaders of the government were so encouraged that they predicted their total in the new House would be 300.

Nearly every district where the counting began soon after the polls closed Saturday reported heavy Seiyukai gains and Minseito losses.

The final outcome, however, will not be known until tonight at the earliest, two-thirds of the ballot boxes remaining unopened.

The election, without significance so far as foreign policy was concerned, was principally on economic issues. "A vote for the Seiyukai hastens the return of prosperity," was that party's slogan.

Ran on Inflation Policy.

The Minseito party, which lost control when the cabinet of former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki fell last December, argued that "one can not feed on a fictitious boom," referring to the Seiyukai's assertion that its inflationary policy would bring better times.

The new Diet was elected to replace the one dissolved on January 21. In that Diet the Minseito held 247 seats against 171 held by the Seiyukai and 48 by the Independents, Proletarians and other groups.

There was the usual quota of freak votes. Several Tokyo jokesters voted for Mah Chan-Shan, Chinese general who was routed from his provincial capital of Taitsihar in Manchuria by the Japanese soldiery last fall.

Others voted for Japanese heroes long dead. Many admirers expressed sympathy and indignation by voting for Junnosuke Inouye, former finance minister in the late Wakatsuki cabinet, who was assassinated on February 9.

Plan to Quit League Denied by Yoshizawa

Japanese Foreign Minister Calls Rumor Silly; Restates Policy of Maintaining Open Door; Upholds Kellogg-Briand Pact.

Editor's Note: Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japan's foreign minister, has written for the Associated Press a new statement of Japanese policy. It is especially timely in view of the fact that the League of Nations Assembly has been called for an extraordinary session on March 3. This was done at the request of China for examination of the dispute in Manchuria and the Shanghai incident.

By KENKICHI YOSHIZAWA, Foreign Minister of Japan.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Tokyo, Feb. 21.—It has been suggested that Japan might, whether from pique or policy, withdraw from the League of Nations. This is a silly idea.

Japan has been able through her membership in the council of the League of Nations to put a brake upon precipitate action, which she could have done in no other manner.

The generous enthusiasm of Western observers might, in Japan's absence from the league, have carried them into premature action based on natural but mistaken assumptions.

It would be the height of folly to abandon so favorable a position Moreover Japan is proud of her participation in the work of the league, in which she has since its first inception taken a prominent part.

Recent events have only strengthened her respect for the wisdom with which the covenant of the league was framed, preventing as it does the league or its council from being identified with the majority of its council members, a mistake too often made by the ignorant.

Much less is it possible that this country should repudiate the Briand-Kellogg treaty for the outlawry of war. Had this treaty been duly observed there would have been no attack on the Southern Manchurian Railway, nor on Japanese patrols at Shanghai.

It would be equally impossible and undesirable to repudiate the Wash-

VIRGINIAN ARRESTED IN M'BRIDE KILLING

H. G. Jackson, of Petersburg, Being Held in Murder of Rich Oil Man.

A man named as the murderer of Barney McBride is being held in Petersburg, Va., where he was arrested early yesterday morning, nearly ten years after McBride's body was found in a culvert near Meadows, Md.

He is H. G. Jackson, 32 years old. According to the statements of three persons who say they were told of McBride's murder by an eye-witness, Jackson was the man who crept up behind the wealthy Oklahoma oil man and stabbed him four times.

Jackson was taken into custody on a warrant charging murder sworn to by Deputy Sheriff Tom Garrison, of Prince Georges County. He made no resistance when arrested in a pool room on Sycamore street, police say, but is determined to fight extradition. Preparation of the necessary papers to bring him back to Maryland will take several days, but Sheriff Garrison hopes to have him in the Marlboro jail by the end of the week.

A ring with a huge diamond, part of the loot for which McBride was stabbed in a road house, was in Jackson's possesson after the murder. Garrison said. Several months ago the prisoner sent it to a woman in

Preliminary Operation Is Performed on Harris

(Associated Press..)

Senator Harris, of Georgia, successfully underwent an operation yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital.

It was described as of a preliminary nature. A prostate gland operation is to be performed when the senator has further recovered his strength.

Surgeons said after the operation that all symptoms were favorable and the 64-year-old senator was "resting very comfortably."

CONGRESS SALARIES DEFENDED BY REED

Senator Says Agitation for Reduction "Quibbling;" Cites Expenses.

(Associated Press.)

Agitation for reduction of congressional salaries yesterday was branded by Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, as "quibbling" with small constructive purpose.

The senior Pennsylvania senator reminded an advocate of salary-cutting that voters have the privilege of removing at the congressional elections those members from Congress who do "not earn their salaries."

"If the publications and the people who are fond of agitating this subject," Reed wrote C. A. McDowell, of Pitcairn, Pa., "would give half as much time and attention to fighting wasteful and stupid appropriations for meaningless governmental activities, such as the hundreds of millions we have spent for farm relief that doesn't relieve, it would be much more constructive than this quibbling over congressional salaries."

Reed's letter was in reply to a communication from McDowell, saying: "The public is convinced that politicians in Washington and elsewhere are being paid salaries out of

Iowan Enters Senate Race; Raps Brookhart

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—George Cosson, of Des Moines, former attorney general, today entered the race for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate. His candidacy was announced in a statement outlining his platform and attacking the record of Senator Smith W. Brookhart, whom he criticized as an "obstructionist."

Cosson detailed views in harmony with administration policies, and expressed whole-hearted approval of President Hover's reconstruction program.

Village of Kiangwan Is Held by 400 Troops Against 25,000.

NIPPONESE PIERCE LINE OF OPPONENTS

But Fail to Get Advantage; Counterattack May Be Plan of Foes.

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 22 (U.P.). Lieut. Gen. Uyeda, Japanese commander, today suddenly moved his headquarters from Futan University to Thienlo, north of Kiangwan, so that he could take personal direction of the assault on Tazang, which is 3 miles due west of Kiangwan. Only isolated Chinese detachments remained in Kiangwan, harassing Col. Tokuno's Thirty-fifth Regiment, which was ordered to stay on the scene to clear out snipers.

At 9:30 a. m. severe fighting was resumed west of the Shanghai-Woosung Railroad between Kiangwan and Tazang, the latter Lieut. Gen. Uyeda's next objective. Simultaneously Col. Shimomoto's brigade was reported to be advancing southwestward from Woosung Creek. After severe hand-to-hand fighting in the fog of midmorning, Japanese marines captured the village of Mauhang, northeast of Tazang.

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 22.—The Japanese offensive, repulsed time and again by dogged Chinese soldiers, reopened with a crash at daybreak along the Kiangwan-Chapei front in a further attempt to wrest a village from a handful of men.

A few Chinese troops, estimated at 400, today still held the walled village of Kiangwan, midway of the battle line from Chapei to Woosung, against the strategy and blows of a Japanese army of 25,000.

Japanese heavy artillery roared into action against the stout defenders and othe. Chinese troops entrenched along the front with the break of the third day of the great push. Chinese field guns took up the signal of renewed battle manfully, returning shell for shell.

Decisive Battle Likely.

With the visibility through heavy mists and driving rain so poor as to make observations impossible, the Japanese guns shot blindly. Tanks and troops, rushed into battle yesterday, were expected to follow up the barrage, with promise of a decisive engagement as the powerful Chinese defenses northwest of Kiangwan were encountered.

With the Japanese garrison at Woosung seriously drained by the demand for fighters for the Kiangwan sector, unofficial observers interpreted Chinese troop movements toward Woosung as indicating that the Chinese hoped to take advantage of the Japanese weakness at this far extremity of the battle front by launching an offensive of their own.

Although the Japanese drove a hole in the Chinese line north of Kiangwan, Chinese troops, estimated by the Japanese at only 400, held the village against a frontal attack by tanks, artillery, cavalry and infantry in yesterday's assault.

As midnight approached their casualties were unnumbered, but the Japanese admitted they themselves had lost 100 men dead or injured.

After Plan of Action.

The Japanese altered their plan of action shortly after darkness had set in, and rushed reinforcements just north of Kiangwan, driving a hole in the Chinese line there. They previously had pushed in the Chinese defenses south of Kiangwan. They hoped to surround the town on the southeast, east, north and northwest, leaving the Chinese an avenue of escape southwestward.

Washington's Birthday Gives Contest Impetus

Flood of Essays Expected at The Post After Schools in Capital, Virginia and Maryland Complete Celebration of Anniversary Date.

A veritable flood of essays to be entered in The Post George Washington Essay Contest, in which $1,000 in cash prizes will be distributed to 108 fortunate winners, will arrive at The Washington Post after the celebration of George Washington's birthday by the public, private and parochial schools and colleges in Washington and nearby Virginia, it was learned yesterday.

Comments from leading citizens continue, approving The Post Essay Contest as one of the most constructive ways in which to impress upon the youth of the city and territory the lessons of George Washington's life during his Bicentennial. One of the most interesting received yesterday was from Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, who is also prominent in Eastern Star circles in Washington.

"The contestants in The Post George Washington Essay Contest," declared Mrs. Meritt yesterday, "should remember the great lesson of George Washington's life. It has been truly said that we can not live by bread alone, and where there is no vision the people perish.

"Without the inspired vision of George Washington in the troublous days of the American Revolution the history of our country might have been written quite differently. Washington wrought his vision into service and made the best use of it possible. Therefore his true success in life was measured by his service to others.

"As the poet once wrote," continued Mrs. Merritt:

He who does something worth while every day,
Giving pleasure or relieving distress,
Will find satisfaction the greatest of pay,
For it's service that measures success.

"The Washington Post is rendering real service to the community in giving its young people the incen-

Robbers Get Seized Rum As Policeman Slumbers

While a policeman slumbered within 20 feet, 130 gallons of whisky were stolen from the liquor storeroom in the Hyattaville substation of the Prince Georges County police early yesterday.

The robbery was discovered by Policeman Arthur Brown, on duty at the time, when he found the window of the room open. The robbery happened after 4 o'clock yesterday morning, as a number of other officers were in the building until that time. After they left, Brown said, he went to sleep on a cot in the chief's office, next door to the police headquarters, and knew nothing more until he awakened in the morning.

The robbers gained entrance through the courtroom, which is in the same building. A door on the second floor had been left unlocked, which allowed them access to a balcony in the court. Dropping 20 feet from the balcony, they entered the judge's chambers, which join the liquor storeroom. A glass panel in the door between the storeroom and the judge's room was cut out, and the raiders entered the liquor chamber. Opening a window from the inside, the loot was passed out into an alley beside the building.

Two kegs, too large to be passed through the window, were carried out through a hall between the storeroom and police headquarters. A car was apparently waiting outside and the twenty cases and two kegs were load-

FOE USES DUM-DUM LEAD, JAPANESE SAY

Forbidden Bullets Caused Sailors' Wounds, Tokyo Tells Attache Here.

(Associated Press.)

Capt. S. Shimomura, naval attache at the Japanese Embassy, announced last night that he received a message from the Japanese navy department in Tokyo stating a medical examination of wounded seamen from Shanghai who returned to Japan showed the use of dum-dum bullets by the Chinese.

Capt. Shimomura says the use of these soft-nosed bullets, forbidden by the laws of war, has been confirmed by a report from Admiral K. Nomura, in command at Shanghai, stating he captured large quantities of soft-nosed ammunition in China.

Capt. S. Washizu, Japanese military attache, announced he had dispatches from Tokyo stating the Ninth Japanese Division, which is in action at Shanghai, is concentrating on the center of the Chinese position to avoid danger to the International Settlement.

Their anxiety decreased somewhat as a result of the apparent effort of both Japanese and Chinese to keep the Shanghai fighting away from the International Settlement. Washington officials have adopted a course of awaiting developments.

No New Peace Moves Here.

There are no indications that the State Department is preparing to make any new peace moves. The feeling prevails in administration circles that the belligerents must work out a settlement in their own Oriental way before any foreign powers can go further in the formal extension of good offices.

However, Sir Miles Lampson, the British minister, and Chinese civilians are keeping up their peace negotiations with the Japanese minister at Shanghai.

A message received here yesterday by Ambassador Debuchi, Tokyo's envoy, said no progress has been made in framing a satisfactory formula.

An Associated Press dispatch sent from Nanking Sunday quoted Wang Ching-Wei, president of the executive council and really premier of the Nationalist government, as saying China would engage in friendly discussion with Japan if the Japanese government "can check the Japanese army's aggression in China."

Japanese Casualties Small.

Dr. Hawkling Yen, charge d'affaires of the Chinese Legation in Washington, said this position of Wang Ching-Wei was a surprise to him, and he had no official information confirming it.

The Japanese Embassay also received a message yesterday from Tokyo stating the Japanese casualties in the fighting following the attack made upon the expiration of the ultimatum were 7 dead and 30 wounded up to 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. These figures are virtually the same the press had from Japanese sources in Shanghai. They have been a surprise to military experts, who expected to hear of much larger Japanese losses.

No estimates of their losses have yet been made by Chinese officials.

Admiral Taylor, commanding the American fleet at Shanghai, reported to the Navy Department that refugees from the conflict area are flocking into the International Settlement. The situation at Nanking, he said, is quiet.

JAPAN HURLS STRENGTH AT DOGGED CHINESE AGAIN

They declared it would be poor strategy to cut off a Chinese retreat.

The general Japanese plan of action appeared to center at Kiangwan. They had pushed in an eastward curve of the Chapei-Woosung 16-mile line until it was almost straight in a north and south direction between those two points except at Kiangwan. Capture of that ancient walled village would open for them a double gate, which they could swing on the left toward Chapei and on the right toward Woosung. Until they could accomplish this they must therefore continue to try nut-cracker tactics at Kiangwan.

Chapei and Woosung themselves were quiet last night after intense activity at both ends of the line earlier in the day. Only a few artillery and rifle shots were exchanged in the Chapei sector, and as night drew on the Woosung bombardment also subsided.

Chinese May Retreat.

There was some evidence that the Chinese intended to retreat soon from Kiangwan. Japanees airplanes continued to strafe bodies of Chinese troops moving westward in the Kiangwan area and many buildings in the town were in flames. The fires were set either by the Chinese themselves to cover retreat or by Japanese shells.

The Japanese military strategists in changing their tactics to the north of Kiangwan said they were unwilling to sacrifice lives needlessly by rushing the village walls. They hoped by their north flank assault to endanger a greater area of the Kiangwan defense, and as a result force the village garrison to flee. They announced they would continue to subject the town to heavy artillery bombardment in a final effort to drive the Chinese troops regardless of all else.

Last night a battery of sixteen Japanese howitzers was thrust into action north of the walled town, but their gains appeared to be negligible to neutral observers. The Japaneese claimed, however, to have made an advance of 2 miles on both sides of Kiangwan during the two days' fighting.

Chinese Firing Is Heavy.

Their attack on the north drew the heaviest reply from Chinese artillery they had yet encountered. Many shells were dropped near the Kiangwan race course, where part of the Japanese headquarters and cavalry and tank units were stationed. The race course is about a mile east of the town.

While the Chinese shells failed to register direct hits on the Japanese military positions, several shacks between the race course and Gen. Kenkichi Uyeda's headquarters just to the southeast were fired. Several projectiles fell around Futan University, where the Japanese general was quartered last night, and one blasted a pit in the road within a few yards of the university entrance.

Military observers here were of the opinion that Chinese losses from both bombing and artillery yesterday were slight owing to the poor visibility, and they held that the stubborn resistance and poor weather probably would lead Japan to send more troops to Shanghai. It was pointed out that the Japanese took every precaution to prevent unnecessary loss of men, and they gave as a reason for halting the advance south of Kiangwan as concern for the International Settlement, which would be placed in the line of fire.

Issue Conflicting Statements.

The rival press information bureaus of the two armies issued contradictory statements last night as the night wore on. The Chinese said the Japanese had "cremated hundreds of bodies of Japanese marines killed on the Chapei-Woosung line" at Chenshan, an island off Ningpo at the mouth of the Yangtze. The Chinese gave details, saying the bodies were brought to Chenshan aboard a transport and four cruisers, adding that "if the facts were known Japan would be alarmed."

The Japanese said they had gained their objective according to schedule and were now "resting until tomorrow." As for Kiangwan, a spokesman said the Japanese had advanced 2 miles on both flanks of the town, which was held by the Chinese.

The spokesman said the chief difficulty yesterday was supplying drinking water for Japanese troops, but engineers were finally able to bring up great casks to soldiers in their positions. The spokesman insisted that the Japanese were not troubled by the Kiangwan salient, but were merely continuing to push back the Chinese along the 12-mile limit set out by Gen. Uyeda's ultimatum. He said other Japanese activities were meager, adding that the Chinese troops were retiring from Paoshan, a group of forts north of Woosung. He conceded that the Japanese casualties were about 100.

SERVICES FOR KANN WILL BE TOMORROW

Rites Will Be Said at Home at 10 A. M.; Interment in Baltimore.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. tomorrow morning for Simon Kann, president of the S. Kann Co. department store, who died at his home, 2029 Connecticut avenue northwest, early yesterday after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Kann was 70 years old and had recently returned to Washington after a trip to Florida for his health.

Mr. Kann was the son of Solomon Kann, who conducted a dry goods store in Baltimore, and he gained his early knowledge of the merchandising trade while working in his father's store. He later came to this city with his brothers, Louis and Sigmund Kann, and founded a small store at 909 Pennsylvania avenue, about 38 years ago.

Move to Washington.

The business grew rapidly and they purchased a store at Eighth street and Market place, and soon relinquished their holdings in Baltimore, feeling that Washington was a more fertile field for business. The venture proving highly successful and feeling the need of expansion, they opened new additions and subsequently acquired the greater part of the block.

The firm was named after Solomon Kann, the father, and Simon Kann was the only surviving member of the original firm.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence by Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, of which Mr. Kann was a member. Interment will be in the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation Cemetery, tomorrow afternoon.

Supported Many Charities.

During his long career Mr. Kann made a number of friends in business and social circles, and is well known for his philanthropic work throughout the city. He was a stanch supporter of the Community Chest, having participated in their drives. He also supported a number of private charity organizations and was much beloved by both his business associates and employes.

Mr. Kann was affiliated with a number of business organizations, having been an active member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Washington Chamber of Commerce, The Merchants and Manufacturers Association and other business organs.

He is survived by his widow, Sadie Kann, and his nephew, Solomon Kann, who, with Mr. Simon Kann's son-in-law, Bernard Burgunder, who have been active in the store, will carry on the business.

The store will be closed today and tomorrow, reopening on Wednesday.

JEROME WILLIAMS RITES.

Services for Capital Musician Will be Held This Afternoon.

Funeral services for Jerome Williams, who died Saturday at Saranac Lake, N. Y., will be held today at 1:30 o'clock in the Hines Funeral Parlors, at Fourteenth and Harvard streets, northwest. Mr. Williams had been in ill health for more than a year and has been at Saranac since the early summer. He was the son of William H. Williams and the late Mrs. Williams and a brother of Arthur J. Williams and Mrs. Arthur S. Chadwick, all of this city.

He was born in Washington February 8, 1891 and was educated in the District. He was a cultivated musician and well-known pianist and composer. He studied at the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore and more recently with Schleider in Philadelphia and has attained recognition for his piano compositions. He was a member of the Washington Composers' Club, the Friends of Music and was for several years treasurer of the Orpheus.

FRANCIS PUGH RITES.

Air Crash Victim to Be Buried Tomorrow Morning.

The funeral services for Lieut. Francis Pugh, U. S. A., Air Corps, who was killed Saturday when his aeroplane crashed at Hagerstown, Md., will be held at the residence, 6404 Georgia avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock and the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, where requiem mass will be said at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery with full military honors.

Lieut. Pugh is survived by his mother, Mrs. Anais J. Pugh, and four brothers, Michael O'Connor, Edward L., James H. and Robert A. Pugh. Edward L. Pugh is a lieutenant in the Marine Corps, stationed at Quantico, Va.

MISS CHILDS' FUNERAL.

Veteran Welfare Worker Is Buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

The Revs. J. Woodman Babbitt and Irving Ketchum conducted the burial services Saturday of Miss Fannie Graham Childs at her residence, 5901 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Childs for 47 years was actively engaged in welfare work as treasurer of the combined Presbyterian churches of Washington and suburban areas. After a short illness she died of heart trouble last Thursday.

So actively was Miss Childs identified with the philanthropic work of the entire community there was named for her the "Fannie Childs Community Center" in connection with the Homes Mission project.

Burial was in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Former Boy Emperor Arrives at Mukden

Mukden, Manchuria, Feb. 21 (U. P.).—Henry Pu-Yi, the former "Boy Emperor" of China, reportedly ambitious to restore the Manchu dynasty to power, came here today from Dairen, where he has been under protection of Japanese since the Far Eastern military struggle became intense.

Although the Chinese national government officially announced it would not recognize the independence of Manchuria, it has been understood that Henry Pu-Yi would become either life-president or emperor of the territory, which includes the three eastern provinces, Jehol and part of Mongolia. The territory, now occupied by Japan, was declared independent last week and pro-Japanese leaders are now conferring here preparatory to announcing the form which the new government will take.

ANNAPOLIS PASTOR DEFIES SUSPENSION

Dr. Herson Occupies Pulpit in Spite of Action of Church Board.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21.—Defying higher officials of the church by whom he was suspended from ministerial duties pending his formal trial on certain charges at the annual meeting of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in June, and acceding to wishes expressed in a resolution adopted unanimously by the official board of Calvary Church, Annapolis, the Rev. Dr. Joseph T. Herson, pastor of that church, today occupied the pulpit and participated in services both morning and evening.

Dr. Herson did not, however, preach the sermon, acting upon the advice of his attending physician because of his present condition of health. Bearing out the steadfastness with which the local church congregation is supporting the minister in the pending situation, attendance at the morning service was abnormal. Dr. Herson's part in the service was offering prayer and reading the psalter. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Charles L. Pate, a retired minister of Baltimore, whose services had been obtained by the church pulpit committee prior to the action taken by the official board in inviting Dr. Herson to participate in the services.

Dr. Herson was ordered suspended from his post two weeks ago by Dr. Chesteen Smith, superintendent of the Baltimore Conference after a committee of Baltimore ministers investigated charges lodged against him. The official charges were "unministerial imprudent conduct," though it has since been admitted they do not involve anything bordering on immorality or theft. The local board, after considerable investigation on its own account, took the view that the charges are ridiculous and petty, and the same attitude prevails among the congregation generally. Moreover the board took the position that there is nothing in the rules and regulations of the church conference to suspend a preacher in such a manner

PREACHER DEMANDS MODERNISTS RESIGN

Fundamentalist Opens Fight on Presbyterian Church Dissenting Group.

Philadelphia, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Rev. H. McAllister Griffiths, fundamentalist Presbyterian minister, launched a fight to drive modernists from the church in his sermon today.

He assailed all modernistic doctrine and called upon its promulgators to leave the church and found one of their own. He demanded specifically the resignations of eleven Philadelphia Presbyterian pastors whom he named.

Mr. Griffiths claimed for his ouster movement the support of the Presbyterian League of Faith, an organization which he said included 1,100 ministers, and announced his intention of taking his cause to the General Assembly.

"It is our intention," he declared, "to carry on this fight until the General Assembly decides the issue. If we win the modernists will have to pack and go. If we lose we shall have to establish a new church."

Control of more than $20,000,000 in endowments and the management of many seminaries and colleges hinges on the outcome of the conflict.

Mr. Griffiths assailed particularly the Auburn affirmation and the 1,000 or so ministers who have signed it. The affirmation, an informal creed promulgated by the modernists in 1924, called for a liberal interpretation of five doctrines which the General Assembly in 1923 defined as essential to "the word of God and our standards."

These were the infallibility of the Bible, the Virgin birth, the salvation of the human race through the crucifixion of Christ, the resurrection, and Christ's miracles.

MacDonald Spurns Orders of Doctors

Crisis in Far East Draws Premier to London for Conferences.

London, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald disobeyed doctors' orders and came up to London from his country place today to study the Far Eastern situation. Meanwhile at Plymouth the cruiser Vindictive shipped live ammunition and departed with relief crews for service in China.

As for Mr. MacDonald's trip from Chequers, an official statement explained:

"The prime minister came up to London from Chequers early this afternoon. Public affairs will keep him in London Monday and Tuesday, but his doctors prohibit him from attending sessions of the House of Commons and he is leaving London for further recuperation Wednesday morning."

NEW GUIDE TRACES HISTORY OF CAPITAL

Lawrence Sullivan Paints Intimate Picture in "All About Washington."

"All About Washington," an intimate guide to the Capital, written by Lawrence Sullivan, a member of the staff of The Washington Post, has just been published by the John Day Co.

The following sketches are extracts from it:

"Washington is the unfinished diary of a mighty people—in steel, stone and statuary. Here for 140 years a Nation has cast its hopes in marble, bronze and Indiana limestone—and buried its fears and despairs in the forest swamps of the Powhatans. The city began as a series of swamps, mud flats and verdant rolling forests, where the Powhatans lived in peace and contentment along the "Potowmac," and stands today as the paleface's great symbol of the Empire of Equal Men.

"Politically, economically, spiritually, the Capital of the United States is unlike every other city in the world.

The White House is the only private home in the United States which is conducted as a public institution. It is the national museum maintained by a grateful republic as a domicile for Presidents.

Collectively, American citizens will maintain with their lives the glorious Anglo-Saxon tradition that every man's house is his castle; but individually every man is jealous of his traditional right to inspect the Executive Mansion any week day between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

The first public building erected in the Federal City, the Mansion has sheltered all of our Presidents save George Washington, who built it.

John Quincy Adams stirred up a terrific public tempest in 1826 by installing a billiard table. Gas light extinguished the presidential oil lamps in 1849, and in 1851 Mrs. Fillmore pursued her campaign against malaria by the extreme step of installing a bath tub. A central heating plant was added in 1853 and electric lights in 1890. President Roosevelt demanded a telephone and an elevator. Calvin Coolidge put in the first radio. Herbert Hoover realized a cooling system for the executive wing in 1929, introduced talking pictures in 1930 and in June, 1931, greeted the first aviator ever to land a plane—an autogiro—on the executive grounds.

Capitol Hill apparently was predestined by nature to be the seat of the givers of the law. A century before Maj. L'Enfant selected the commanding elevation as the site for the projected Capitol the mighty Algonquins already had reared their tribal council house there. According to the Algonquin tradition the first requirement of law makers was a sweeping arrow shot at all subsidiary clans. The impregnable hilltop, 90 feet above the tidewater lands of the Powhatans, was itself the first law. * * *

Wearing the symbolic regalia of the Ancient Order of Free Masons, including an apron made for him by the Marchioness de Lafayette, President Washington laid the corner stone of the Capitol on September 18, 1793. A complete account of the gala ceremony still is preserved in the records of Washington's lodge, in Alexandria, Va. After the concluding prayer, this account sets forth, "the whole company retired to an extensive booth, where an ox of 500 pounds' weight was barbecued, of which the company generally partook, with every abundance of other recreation."

In the late 1790's a very young constitutional union began playing with building blocks—and with grandiose ideas of nationalism. Washington Monument is the result.

Conceived and projected in the First Congress, the idea was reduced to blue prints in the 1830's. The corner stone was laid on the Fourth of July, 1848. Thirty-seven years later, in 1885, the towering marble obelisk was dedicated. And by the end of 1931 a few more than 10,500,000 persons had ascended the imposing shaft. Such is the history of the United States of America.

Shanghai (Monday), Feb. 22 (A.P.). Caught by an exploding shell while fighting a fire in the Hongkew District of the International Settlement, six firemen, including three foreigners, were wounded late last night.

Taxicab Driver and Girl Die in Gas-Filled Room

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Joseph Dabias, 25-year old taxi driver, and Marion Glockstein, 18, were found dead in Dabias' gas-filled apartment today by the girl's father.

Dabias, who was married but estranged from his wife, told neighbors yesterday he was going to give a "farewell party," detectives learned. With this clue, they were undecided tonight whether the deaths resulted from a suicide pact, a homicide or merely an accident.

Rites Held for Former King.

Sybillenort, Germany, Feb. 21 (A. P.).—Catholic and Lutheran funeral services were held today for former King Friedrich August of Saxony, who died last week. Crowds filed past his bier reverently. Former Crown Prince George, a Jesuit priest, blessed his father's remains while conducting a funeral mass. Former Crown Princess Cecile and her son, Huberus, were among the mourners.

TWO HOAX MESSAGES SENT BY COOK GIRL, CONSUL SAYS

fiance, St. George Arnold, 26, an electrical engineer whom she was soon to wed, and urged her not to return to this country. They were signed "Helen James."

Mr. Beak emphasized that his belief that she had written them herself was only his own conjecture, and did not attempt to explain it. The messages were upon the usual Italian telegraph forms, typewritten, and had apparently been handed in at Capri, not far from Naples, Mr. Beak said. Both messages were delivered aboard the ship. One was received by the master, Capt. Howard Uncles, and the other presumably by the purser.

Both were read to Miss Cook over the telephone at her hotel in Naples a few hours before the ship sailed for Boston on February 4. She received them in person when she came aboard. Their text has not been made public.

Mr. Beak said the girl's death on the ship as it was nearing Gibraltar was, in his belief, due entirely to pneumonia. In the face of expressed medical opinion that the apparent symptoms of pneumonia can be caused by overdose of certain kinds of tablets designed to alleviate headache and restlessness, Mr. Beak said he would await the report of the inquest now in process at Gibraltar before reaching a definite opinion on that point.

A quantity of such tablets was reported to have been found among Miss Cook's effects in her stateroom. Her vital organs are being subjected to chemical analysis by British medical authorities at Gibraltar, where the inquest has been adjourned to await the result.

The Chinese Prince, with five other passengers who had boarded it at Naples, reached Boston yesterday after a stormy trip. Immediately after making port Capt. Uncles, accompanied by representatives of the steamship line; Mr. Arnold, his counsel, Edmund L. Twomey; Miss Cook's uncle, Albert Carroll, and an attorney for Miss Cook's estate met at the British consulate, where Mr. Beak, acting informally, presided over a private meeting of all concerned.

In conformity with instructions from the British foreign office, the consul obtained exact copies of the two messages which Capt. Uncles, upon instructions from his line, had refused to make public. These will be sent to Gibraltar for the guidance of British authorities there.

At the conclusion of the conference it was announced there would be no statement because of the feeling of Miss Cook's relatives that the matter was a private one. In keeping with that understanding, Mr. Beak made plain today that his views were entirely personal and not those of the conference as a whole.

The consul general said from what Capt. Uncles had told him he believed the master, with the assistance of three other women passengers, had done everything possible for Miss Cook. The captain told Mr. Beak that on the night of sailing Miss Cook had appeared on the deck clad in a low-cut gown.

The weather was sharp and he concluded she had caught a cold which developed into pneumonia. When her absence from table was noticed he went to her cabin the next day and found her in a coma with a high temperature.

The five passengers aboard the ship agreed in the main with the belief of the captain that Miss Cook had died of pneumonia, although one of them, Robert Beahm, Philadelphia heating engineer, said he had been told positively by the port surgeon at Gibraltar that the girl had committed suicide from a poison unknown to him.

The passengers agreed that Miss Cook had not unpacked any of her luggage as she might have been expected to do in starting upon a comparatively long voyage.

Mr. Beak said he had suggested to all concerned that the United States consul at Naples ought to be in a position to clear up the mystery of the origin of the two messages. Miss Cook's mother and the dead girl's sister, Louise, are due at New York Tuesday aboard the Conte Biancamano from Naples.

POLICY IS STATED AGAIN BY JAPANESE OFFICIAL

ington nine-power treaty which is a great beacon standing alone in the mazes of Chinese international relations.

We can not pretend, however, that this succinct treaty furnishes anything like a complete guide to international dealings with China, had China since the fall of the Manchu dynasty, ever presented a coherent, responsible front to the world, things might have been different.

Cites Chaos in China.

But in the present distracted state of that country, ravaged as it is by the rival ambitions of contending militarists, the scheme of the nine-power treaty has become inadequate. It contemplated some sort of cosmos where there never has really been anything but chaos.

Therefore, while Japan is fully determined to live up to the provisions of the treaty as far as they go, she feels they do not go very far. Would a new treaty, the product of a new conference like that of Washington, prove any more complete? We can not help feeling in the kaleidoscopic state of affairs in China, that it might produce more harm than good and endeavor to lay down in conference fixed lines of conduct and detailed provisions for application in that continually changing scene.

It is the settled policy of Japan to deal with each case as it arises by the simple method of direct negotiations with China.

When the interests of other countries are involved, Japan heartily welcomes their close cooperation. But it is feared that any attempt to frame rules for the multifarious and confusing affairs in China would be an undertaking whose magnitude would be out of proportion to its effective results.

Defect In Washington Pact.

For the same reason I do not think there would be much advantage in further definition of the terms employed in the nine-power treaty. The existing terms seemed adequate when the treaty was framed and terms seeming adequate today may be wholly inappropriate six months hence. What is wanted rather is a frank recognition of the facts.

The defect in the Washington treaty, it seems to me, is that it envisaged China not as it was but as the powers thought it ought to be. This has deprived that instrument of much of its value, to face the facts is the first requisite of statesmanship.

An entirely unjustified uneasiness appears to exist in some quarters concerning whether Japan may occupy permanently portions of Chinese territory south of the great wall. It would be most repugnant to Japan to undertake commitments of such a kind involving her in responsibilities altogether unnecessary and inconvenient. Japan has not the slightest of intention of stultifying herself by such a step. Neither north nor south of the great wall does Japan desire to embark on occupation of territory beyond what she already has on lease.

The troops at present in Shanghai will be kept there precisely so long and in such numbers as they are necessary to direct the protection of Japanese interests there, just as American, British, French and Italian troops are there for the protection of their own people and property.

The question has been raised whether Japan might not be led to abandon her friendship for America and Great Britain, which heretofore has been such a conspicuous feature of her foreign policy. It should be obvious that the vast interests of America and Britain in the Pacific, as well as long-standing cultural and economic ties binding Japan to those countries, must continue to operate in the future as they have in the past. Not only sentiment but necessity will lead Japan to maintain the friendliest relations and cooperation with these great powers.

The presence of Japanese forces outside the railway zone in Manchuria appears to have caused uneasy apprehensions that it may be prolonged into virtual annexation. This is a complete mistake.

Stresses Open Door Policy.

Japan desires no continental commitments. She recognizes fully and absolutely the principles of the open door and equal opportunity throughout Manchuria as well as in China proper. Nor has Japan the slightest territorial ambition there. She only desires peace and security with participation in the field equally with other nations for her commercial industry. Without civil peace there can be no open door.

As for the government of Manchuria, that is a matter for Manchurians, and it rests with the future to say what their decision will be.

Some profess alarm at the prospect of trouble between Japan and the Soviet government and are exercised concerning possible action of Japan regarding the Chinese Eastern Railway and other railways in which foreign countries are interested. Japan has no concern with railways not her own except in so far as the nine-power treaty guaranteed her their use on equal terms. Since Japan is determined to respect the rights and the interests of the Soviet Union as of all foreign countries, there is no reason to suppose that the Soviet Union will depart from the lines of its statements hitherto followed—lines dictated by cool judgment and the tried and tested principle of non-intervention.

Regrets Bloodshed.

I regret profoundly, as must every thinking Japanese, the loss of life and destructive havoc of the past five months. Unfortunately, as long as China remains the happy hunting ground of selfish and predatory warlords, this danger will remain.

Japan sympathizes warmly with innocent Chinese people and with the praiseworthy efforts of the Chinese to attain equality in all respects with the most advanced nations. But first they must achieve domestic peace. Until that has been accomplished other nations will from time to time be faced with the stern necessity of defending themselves against militaristic violence in the only way that such defense is possible.

Garner's Backers Gather for Boom

Sterling Is Present to Aid in Naming of Texan to Presidency.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 21 (A.P.). San Antonio was the gathering place for John N. Garner enthusiasts tonight, preparatory to booming the Texan Speaker of the National House of Representatives for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Tomorrow political leaders of the Lone Star State will assemble to talk of "Chapparal Jack's" changes to become his party's standard bearer in the election of next November.

Gov. R. S. Sterling and other State officials were here to participate in a State-wide rally designed to give Texas' choice for the Presidency a big "coming out party" although the honoree plugged away, maintaining strict reticence, at his job in Washington.

CONGRESS SALARIES DEFENDED BY REED

all proportion to their abilities or compared with what they could make in any other position."

His letter constituted the first expression of Reed on the subject.

"If representatives and senators do not earn their salaries," it continued, "or if it is true that they are paid more than they could earn in private life, the fault rests with the voters and not with those whom the voters elect. You have a chance to change your representative every two years and to change your senators every six years.

"To reduce the salaries of senators and representatives would make it almost impossible for a poor man to serve in Congress. Don't forget that out of his $10,000 a year the average congressman has to finance his campaigns and spend a considerable sum in traveling back and forth between his district and Washington in addition to maintaining a home of some kind in Washington and not infrequently another in his home district.

"I may say further that I know personally a considerable number of senators and representatives who, because of the size of the work load, have to bear part of the expense of running their office personally. In other words, the allowance for secretarial and clerk hire is not sufficient for this purpose in many instances. This has been the experience of all the senators from Pennsylvania for many years."

He pointed out also the legislative bill of the cost of running the legislative branch of the Federal Government amounts annually to about $11,500,000, or less than one-fourth of 1 per cent of the total Federal appropriations.

Mrs. Kate Mason Dies in Washington

Widow of Virginia Judge Was Native of Capital; Rites Tomorrow.

Mrs. Kate Henry Mason, 70 years old, widow of Judge John E. Mason, of Fredericksburg, Va., died yesterday at her home, 2007 O street northwest, after a long illness.

Mrs. Mason was the daughter of the late Capt. and Mrs. James Lake Henry, U. S. A., and was born in Washington. After her marriage she lived in Fredericksburg for 30 years, and returned to Washington twelve years ago.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph P. Crockett, of Washington, and a brother, J. W. Henry, of Daytona Beach, Fla. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow in St. John's Episcopal Church in King George County, Va. Interment will be in the church burial ground.

Soviet Strips Trotzky And 36 of Citizenship

Moscow, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Leon Trotzky and 36 other Russian emigres living abroad were formally stripped of their Soviet citizenship today and forbidden "for all time" to enter the Union of Soviet Socialist republics. The action was taken by the presidium of the central executive committee.

In the case of Trotzky, the action was a mere formality, for he was banished permanently from the Soviet Union two years ago and sent to Istanbul, Turkey, where he since has lived as a bitter exile.

Mrs. Smith Rites To Be Tomorrow

Mother of Police Lieutenant Was Long Resident of Georgetown.

Funeral services for Mrs. Rebecca Smith, who died at the home of her daughter at Union, N. J., Saturday, after an illness of several weeks, will be held at the Martin W. Hysong funeral home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on January 6, 1849, and came to this city soon after her marriage. She was a resident of Georgetown for 40 years, leaving here several years ago to live with her daughter in New Jersey. She was the widow of Cornelius W. Smith, who was employed for a long time at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Ruth R. Eaton, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Fannie Scholz, of Union, N. J., and Mrs. Rosamond Ashby, of this city, and five sons, Joseph D. Smith, of New York; Cornelius W. Smith, of Newark, N. J.; Frank I., Edwin and Milton D. Smith, of this city. Milton D. Smith is a lieutenant in the local Police Department.

Temporal Differences Cause Rector to Quit

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Rev. Charles E. McAllister, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, announced today he has resigned, effective late next spring. The vestry members announced they had accepted the resignation, saying the differences were "entirely temporal and not spiritual, mostly concerning educational and financial programs."

The first Korean ever elected to the Diet, Shunkin Boku, independent, was elected from a Tokyo precinct.

As the count began, the public's interest in the contest was aroused. Crowds in front of the newspaper bulletin boards read the election returns first, then the battle news from the fight with the Chinese at Shanghai, which up to that time was the major attraction.

The successful candidates include Ken Inukai, son of the premier; Isoo Abe, proletarian leader, called the father of baseball in Japan, and Shigeji Komai, for whom Inouye was about to speak in the campaign when he was assassinated.

Among those defeated are Bunji Sueuki, Japan's outstanding labor leader.

DRYS SEEN FIGHTING FATHER OF COUNTRY

Curran Says Antisaloon Body Would Not Vote Today for Washington.

(Associated Press.)

Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said yesterday that if Washington were alive "he would not get a vote from the Antisaloon League or the W. C. T. U.—but he would undoubtedly be elected."

In an open letter to Representative Bloom (Democrat), New York, associated director of the National Washington Bicentennial Commission, Curran said:

"While you at the head of your ceremonial army are marching ahead so happily to celebrate the Bicentennial of George Washington's Birthday, you ought to look around over your shoulder and see what the drys have done to your rear guard. Do you know that they have cut Washington out of our old song, 'Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean?' They cut Washington out at the same time that they cut out the wine cup which used to be in the song.

"In 1902 Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, of the Navy, got out a book of 'naval songs' in which the third verse of 'O Columbia! the Gem of the Ocean, or the Red, White and Blue' read as follows:

"The wine cup, the wine cup bring hither,
And fill ye it up to the brim!
May the mem'ry of Washingto ne'er wither,
Nor the star of his glory dim!'

"But that was away back in 1902, before the Antisaloon League and the W. C. T. U. had really got going.

"In 1925 the national committee for the preservation of existing records of the national society of the Colonial Dames of America (that is quite a speech in itself) published 'American War Songs,' in which the third verse of 'Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean,' begins with the following four lines:

'Old Glory' to greet now come hither,
With eyes full of love to the brim;
May the wreathes of our heroes ne'er wither,
Nor a star of our banner grow dim.

"Just where did we lose our wine cup as we came along the road from 1902 to 1925? And just where did the memory of Washington begin to wither, so that the star of his glory grew so dim as to disappear altogether?

"Good old George Washington—I guess if he were alive today he would not get a vote from the anti-Saloon League or the W. C. T. U.—but he would undoubtedly be elected.

"How about a word about Washington and wine when you make your big speech on Monday? They were close together, just as close as Damon and Pythias, or Park and Tilford, or the Smith brothers who make the cough drops up in Poughkeepsie."

SENATOR DAVID I. WALSH.

THE South may have remained unreconstructed so long after the Civil War that being a Democrat became a habit which seldom has been broken, but good old Massachusetts sort of got set in her political ways, too, and it was not until November, 1918, that the Bay State sent a Democrat to the United States Senate.

It was young David Ignatius Walsh, Irish Catholic Democrat, who persuaded the voters to violate their long standing practice and send a Democrat to join his Southern colleagues in the Senate. It was something of a revolution. Not only was a Democrat elected but Mr. Walsh defeated a Republican whose place seemed indisputable in his own State and elsewhere through New England.

But the 1924 Democratic debacle included the engulfing of Senator Walsh in the Republican victory flood. He won 544,600 votes but his opponent received 566,188. Two years later, however, there was another election and former Senator Walsh dropped the "former" and became senator again, succeeding William M. Butler, who had been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. Massachusetts had another chance to pass on Senator Walsh two years later and again he was reelected, this time by a plurality of more than 124,000.

Which certainly doesn't seem a bad record for the first Democrat who was able to persuade Massachusetts voters to send him to the United States Senate since Civil War days.

Tall, well-filled out, light brown hair, which is beginning to thin, and blue eyes, mark the physical person of Senator Walsh, who has something of the orator about his mouth, an agreeable manner over an air of willingness and ability to fight. His voice is well pitched, not strained, but rounded, and he speaks with the universal air of the cultured man.

His home is in Fitchburg, Mass. He was born in Leominster on November 11, 1872. He attended public schools, Holy Cross College, Boston universities and has degrees from several other universities. He is a lawyer. He was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1900. In 1913 he was lieutenant governor. In 1914 he was elected governor and reelected the following year. He participated in Democratic national conventions, the State constitutional convention and various other activities before he was sent to the United States Senate. His present term expires on March 3, 1935.

HARMONY IN PARTY PLEDGED BY RITCHIE

Asserts Name Has Not Been Authorized in Any State Presidential Primary.

Detroit, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Here as the guest of Michigan Democrats and the Crusaders, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland said this afternoon that, regardless of his presidential aspirations, "there will be no monkey wrenches thrown into the party machinery by my supporters."

In an interview Gov. Ritchie said he holds "the eighteenth amendment had no proper place in the Federal Constitution and that we should bend our efforts to eliminating it. The (Democratic national) platform should place the party on record for the desired changes."

He said he has not authorized the entering of his name in the presidential primary of any State and that he does not expect to do so—not even in Maryland.

"We will get over wheat stabilizing policies which do not stabilize," he said, "and prohibition policies which do not prohibit. Some day we will have a tariff which will let us do business with the world again, and a railroad policy which will point some way out of the perplexing difficulties which beset these arteries of American prosperity and repositories of American savings."

Murray Formally In Presidency Race

Announces He Will Seek Democratic Nomination "For Middle Class."

Oklahoma City, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Gov. William H. Murray today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President.

Characteristically, the fiery executive, who returned from South America penniless in 1929 and hitchhiked his way through his campaign, declared he will "make no trades, form no combination nor compromise on any principle for delegates or for the nomination."

"If successful, my hands will be free of baneful influences," he said. "I feel reasonably certain of the election, if nominated, but if not nominated, I shall have escaped a herculean task and an awful responsibility and thereby won a longer life than by assumption of the burdens of the great and responsible office."

Leaving here tomorrow afternoon, Murray will speak at Indianapolis, Monticello, Marion and Gary, Ind., then return to Indianapolis for a State Democratic convention.

Sir Maurice de Bunsen, British Diplomat, Dies

London, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Sir Maurice de Bunsen, retired British diplomat, died here tonight. He was 80 years old.

Sir Maurice entered the British diplomatic service in 1877, serving in various posts at Tokyo, in Siam, at Istanbul and at Paris until 1905 when he became minister to Portugal. He subsequently was ambassador to Spain and to Austria-Hungary, serving at Vienna in 1913 and 1914. He was special ambassador to South America in 1918 and retired the following year.

TINKHAM ATTACKED IN CANNON'S REPLY

Term of "Coward" Is Used in Answer to Charges Made in House.

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., replied yesterday to a recent attack in the House by Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, with a statement of "facts showing that Tinkham is reckless and abusive on the floor of the House, where he is immune from prosecution, but is a cautious coward where he can be held responsible in the courts."

The Southern Methodist clergyman, who is suing Tinkham for $500,000 on libel charges, said in the preamble to his statement that "Tinkham was running true to form and was getting into the Congressional Record his regular biennial speech for the consumption of his Boston constituency to insure its continued support in the election this fall."

His statement says:

"When questioned during his speech by Representative Blanton, Tinkham denied that he or his attorney had pleaded immunity in the District court. But on February 19 Representative Blanton presented and read on the floor of the House the facts from the official court records as given above showing Tinkham's gross misrepresentations. On February 20 Tinkham attempted to reply, but when closely pinned down by Representative Blanton, Tinkham pleaded the "baby act" and denied responsibility for the acts of his own attorneys.

"Until Tinkham gives out over his own signature free from all immunity copies in full of his speeches of June 17, 1930, and of February 18, 1932, so that he may be held responsible for all the false statements he has made, I assert again that he will stand convicted of falsehood and cowardice and will be unworthy of respect of honorable fair-minded men, whether they be dry or wet, Protestant or Roman Catholic."

DRYS OUTLIVE WETS IN SENATE SERVICE

Editor's Note—Only one of the 20 senators who voted in 1917 against submitting the eighteenth amendment to the States, still remains in office, whereas 22 who favored the measure continue at their posts. The following article presents an interesting survey of political reaction to the prohibition laws.

(United Press.)

Only one of twenty senators who back in 1917 voted against submitting the eighteenth amendment to the various States remains in the Seante today.

He is J. Hamilton Lewis, colorful Democrat from Illinois, and he has been out of the Senate most of the intervening years since the measure was proposed. In comparison, 22 of the 65 senators who favored the action, still hold their jobs.

In the House, 60 of the 282 members who voted in favor of submission remain in office and 21 of the 128 opposed continue at their desks.

Many Removed by Death.

Seventy-five per cent of the senators who voted in favor of the famous Jones "five and ten" law still hold office in comparison with only 55.5 per cent of those who voted against it. There is less distinction in the House where 74 per cent of the members who voted "aye" are still politically active, as are 70 per cent of the "noes."

Death has removed many of the antiprohibitionists in Congress, but the activities of dry leaders at the polls, it is claimed here, removed the greatest percentage.

Records of those still playing prominent roles in Congress today present an interesting contrast. Vice President Charles H. Curtis, as a senator from Kansas, voted throughout for prohibition, as did the famous insurgent, Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, chairman of the powerful foreign relations committee, has one prohibition "no" to his vote record. It was in support of President Wilson's veto of the Volstead act.

La Follette Failed to Vote.

Robert M. La Follette, youthful senator from Wisconsin, has been in Congress only for the Jones law vote and then he did not go on record.

Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic presidential possibility, voted against submission of the eighteenth amendment to the States, but has voted for the Volstead act and for the Jones law. Most of the other House leaders of today voted consistently in favor of prohibition. The one exception is Chairman Edward W. Pou, of the rules committee, who voted "no" on all prohibition measures except on the Jones law, when he did not vote at all.

Representative J. Charles Linthicum, of Maryland, leader of the House Democratic "wet bloc," also has been a consistent opponent of prohibition. Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, who leads the Republican "wets," only entered Congress on November 8, 1927. He did not vote on the Jones law.

Table of Original Votes.

A table of the original votes and of the number of members remaining follows:

Original Senate Vote.	Yeas.	Noes.	Not Voting.

Falling Whaleboat Kills Sailor on U. S. Cruiser

Panama, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Russell S. Kelly, first class seaman, of Valdosta, Ga., was instantly killed today when a boom wire on the cruiser Augusta snapped and dropped a whale boat on his head.

Other sailors had narrow escapes as the boat crashed to the deck and the boom struck the ship's airplane, cutting it in half. The Augusta was docked at Balboa on the way to Hawaii.

POLICEMAN SLEEPS; ROBBERS GET RUM

ed into this. The liquor had been seized by police who were waiting for a court order for its destruction.

The practice of keeping large quantities of liquor was initiated by State's Attorney Alan Bowie when he entered his present term of office. Previously it had been the habit of the police to destroy all seized liquor at once, keeping only enough for evidence. Mr. Bowie insisted that all liquor be kept until its owners had been tried, and that a court order for the destruction be then obtained.

Chief J. J. Crowley has asked Policeman Brown to make an official statement regarding the robbery. He expects to receive this today. It is estimated that about five men were concerned in the burglary. All the liquor taken was ordinary corn whisky. Several months ago the storeroom at Marlboro was tampered with, but was not entered.

Japanese Concession Increases Defenses

Hankow, China, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Japanese concession today began increasing its defenses; and bluejackets in barracks ashore were held ready for an emergency.

The concession was fortified by earthworks supported by steel and iron plates. All roads into the area were blocked by barbed wire entanglements. Sandbag barricades and "pill boxes" were erected at various strategic points.

$30,000 Gem Theft Is Bared in New York

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Daily News says jewels valued at $30,000 were stolen last week under mysterious circumstances from Mrs. Robert T. Stone, wife of the head of R. T. Stone & Co., brokers.

The story asserts the gems were taken in some unexplained manner from the automobile in which Mrs. Stone's debutante sister, Miss Edith McCoon, was bringing them to New York from Greenwich, Conn.

LIFETIME FURNITURE IS MORE THAN A NAME

If Washington Came Back, Wouldn't He Be Amazed!

By JOHN J. DALY

ON this his Bicentennial, if Washington should come to Washington he would hardly recognize the old place.

Times have changed. Traffic conditions, for instance, would startle the Father of His Country, who probably found it much easier to cross the Delaware than it is now to cross Pennsylvania avenue.

And styles: Washington would wonder what had happened to the girls, and their curls and, whoops, my dear, their skirts.

Ideas, too, are different. So, Washington, reading a recent editorial, would wonder. It stated: "A few well trained troops would have settled the Revolutionary War in a few months." This, after several million well-trained troops had taken almost five years to end the World War that is not quite over yet, with the world getting ready for another period of military training and operations. Washington would wonder. Once the Revolutionary War was settled, it was settled—and that was that.

* * * *

WASHINGTON would be surprised: Airplanes rushing through the sky, railroad trains whizzing down the tracks, buses bumping over the roads, taxis careening around corners, steamboats chugging past Mount Vernon, people rushing around the countryside, running hither and thither and yon, everybody out of breath saving time and no time left to breathe.

One whirlwind trip around the Rialto, to the theaters, the motion picture palaces, a night club or two, and Washington would begin longing for the good old days. There is always proof, through the night, of bombs bursting in air, and he would be proud of the reminder of the Revolution, accompanied by the melodious screeching of fire sirens, ambulances racing through the boulevards, shots fired at fleeing gunmen, backfiring from automobiles and phantom snipers shooting at passers-by.

Here only in spirit, Washington will miss quite a lot of excitement that might be his if he should visit America during his bicentennial year. But think of the wear and tear on his nerves as he watched the new revolution in life and manners.

With all this commotion in his ears, were he permitted a request number, played by the jazz orchestra, Washington's wish undoubtedly would be expressed in the song, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia!"

POLITICAL FEUD MAY FOLLOW GARNER'S ATTACK ON HOOVER

tend credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System, and the President's reorganization plan.

On Lincoln's birthday, nearly all the Republican orators decried the abuse that was being heaped on President Hoover; nearly all of them gave the President credit for the rehabilitation program that has been enacted by Congress, and virtually all of them predicted that this program would result in his reelection.

Democrats Assailed Speeches.

The Democrats didn't like the speeches, and Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader in the Senate, was quick to absolve his party of piling abuse on the President. The abuse, he said, had come from members of the President's own party.

Robinson also challenged the claim that the Glass-Steagle bill was conceived by President Hoover, insisting that it was a Demoocratic measure.

The reorganization plan submitted by President Hoover brought a lusty "Hell's bells!" from Speaker Garner, and a statement from Representative Joe Byrns, of Tennessee, that Hoover had hurriedly submitted the plan after hearing that the Democrats had one of their own.

Speaker Garner's Statement.

The statement Speaker Garner issued yesterday follows:

"Cooperation between the two great partise in effecting emergency legislation is a fine thing. When such issues as now confront the country are up, is no time for partisan politics. But cooperation does not mean that one party to it shall claim the right to have everything it asks enacted into law, to the exclusion of what the other party deems necessary for the public welfare.

"The Democrats of the Senate and House of Representatives have sought in every way to clear the tracks for measures calculated to relieve the public distress, and particularly to effect such savings in the cost of Government as may make it possible to balance the budget, with the minimum of hardship involved in increased taxes, et cetera.

"Our course has met with approbation all over the country—in fact nobody has ventured to criticize us with the exception of the administration, which appears to regard it as requisite not only that the Democrats shall sign on the dotted line, but insists that the administration should have all the credit for whatever is accomplished.

Must Be Full Partners.

"Obviously the Democratic majority of the House subscribes to no such interpretation of its duty. If we are going to be partners in the enterprise of redeeming prosperity, in reducing the distress of the depression, in effecting economies in government, in formulating measures adequate to produce the revenue the Government requires, we must be full partners, taking our full share in the responsibilities, and participating in whatever benefits accrue, political or otherwise.

"One of our important tasks—perhaps the most important—is to straighten out the deficiency in the Treasury, that has come after a dozen years of uninterrupted and unhampered Republican control and direction of our finances. Our task has not been made easier by the errors of hundreds of millions of dollars in the budget estimates the President has sent us.

"It would be absurd, regardless of politics, for us to accept as financial gospel the output of the source of such miscalculation—the administration that permitted the Treasury to get into such a fix. What we are doing is to carefully consider every recommendation that comes from the White House, without prejudice; to accept what in our judgment appears to be worth while and to reject or tinker into shape what seems to us futile or worse.

Right to Expect Cooperation.

"We have a right to expect that the administration will take our judgment as impartially as we take theirs. In other words, we regard it as part of the undeclared compact of concert for the public good, that when we have altered an administration measure the administration cooperate with us in getting it passed, instead of jockeying to have its own way exclusively, and without an effort to make the country believe that whenever we do not follow the letter of the President's proposals we are playing politics.

"It ought to be obvious that the Executive has neither sufficient influence with the whole of his party delegation in Congress, nor the power to do things by himself, and therefore must have participation by the Democrats if we are to reach the national objective. It is well enough to talk of a political truce, but let me tell you that the kind of truce we intend is not that the administration shall continue hostilities while we abstain from them.

"So far we have had no cooperation in the true sense of the word. Such measures as the Glass-Steagall (Federal Reserve credit expansion) amendment, which has its foundation in legislation frequently sought by Democratic legislators, and as frequently vetoed by the then Republican majorities, are claimed as triumphs for the administration. There is an instance of this in every speech made by one of Mr. Hoover's Cabinet, or other administration spokesmen. The purpose is plainly to improve the President's prospects of reelection by planting the idea that he, singlehanded, has accomplished everything that is done by Congress.

Has Not Submitted Program.

"Now he has sent us a recommendation for the reorganization of the Government. Briefly it consists of a suggestion that Congress abdicate its prerogatives and give him a blanket power to appoint a lot of new officers and make the Government anything he pleases. Why did he not send us his actual program? We know that he has been playing with the thought for a dozen years; that he had his charts of bureau consolidations, department mergers, and redistribution of Government functions ready a decade ago—even though he has never until this time sought to have Congress effect the changes.

"Why has he not told us what he proposes doing and how he means to do it, so that we could accurately judge of the value of his suggestions, instead of adopting his familiar process of asking that we leave it to him?

"Well, we are not going to grant any such unlimited charter. We, too, have our ideas as to how to effect improvements and economies in the national administration. If the President is sincerely desirous of such improvement there is no reason we should not get together. If he did that, he would cooperate; what he seeks instead is to dictate, and nobody can dictate to the Democratic group in Congress."

FALLS CHURCH PAYS WASHINGTON HONOR

Services Held Where First President Worshiped as Vestryman.

Patriotic services honoring the memory of George Washington were held yesterday morning and afternoon in the historic old Falls Church at Falls Church, Va., with which the Father of His Country was so prominently identified as vestryman, church member and attendant at its services in the years before the Revolutionary War.

The services included the singing of patriotic melodies, "Salute to the Flag," recitation of the "American's Creed," "Lord's Prayer," psalms, Bible lessons, notices of the Bicentennial celebration and addresses by the Rev. Charles Stuart McClellan, jr.

In the Rev. Mr. McClellan's morning address, "George Washington, Christian," many generally unknown instances of the religious life of Washington were told. Augustine Washington, father of George, was a vestryman in the Church of Northern Virginia, and it was he who nominated the first rector of Falls Church, the Rev. Charles Green, in 1736.

Shortly after his birth, George Washington was baptized in the orthodox Episcopalian manner, with Bromley Whiting and Capt. Christopher Brooks as godfathers, and Mrs. Mildred Gregory as godmother. At 15 years of age he was sponsor for a child, and one year later he stood for Frances Lewis, and again, when 19 years old, for Fielding Lewis. All through his boyhood and young manhood, Washington was guided by prayer, and his mother's injunction, "My son, neglect not the duty of private prayer," evidently made a deep impression on him.

In later life, during the French, Indian and Revolutionary Wars, Washington was a devout believer in religion and many instances were told by the Rev. Mr. McClellan of how he led his troops in prayer and ordered his chaplains to hold services every Sunday.

A graphic word picture of the terrible sufferings and hardships experienced by Washington and his Army at Valley Forge was told in Rev. McClellan's afternoon address, "Valley Forge—the Gethsemane of Washington."

Washington and his troops were slowly starving and freezing to death during the terrible winter of 1777-78 while the British troops were living lavishly in the City of Philadelphia, and many enemies of Washington were doing all in their power to have that great man discredited and his place usurped by Gen. Gates, but through it all Washington passed through the encampment ministering to the sick and discouraged and keeping his faith in God and prayer.

The Rev. McClellan told a story of how a Quaker by the name of Potts had occasion to pass through a thick woods near headquarters at Valley Forge, and as he traversed the forest he heard a voice before him that was firm, yet appealing. Advancing with slowness and circumspection, the power apparently formed for the purpose, whom should he behold but the commander in chief of the Armies of the United Colonies, on his knees and in the act of devotion to God, with tears in his eyes, imploring the aid of that arm which guides the starry host. He utterly disclaimed all ability of his own for this arduous conflict, and wept at the thought of that irretrievable ruin which his mistakes might bring on this country.

So the first great lesson of Valley Forge is Washington at prayer, an attitude that was natural to him, as his entire training as a boy and young man was a deeply religious one.

Washington Held Racing Enthusiast

Australian Raps Legends, Painting Saintly Role as Unconvincing.

George Washington, who has become a legend instead of a man, according to Tom Skeyhill, lecturer and student of world affairs, was not a saint despite the convicing paintings of many of his biographers.

"Washington raced his horses in Alexandria on Sunday and was fined by the local constabulary. No saint would have done this," Skeyhill declared, drawing bits of the man from Mount Vernon's story from history as he presented his famous address "George Washington, a Human Study," at the Ingram Memorial Congregational Church last night.

Skeyhill denounced recent biographies of George Washington. A vivid picture of Gen. Washington's trying days at Valley Forge were drawn by Skeyhill as he painted the life of the man to his audience. The Australian held his audience spellbound during the address. He climaxed his talk by declaring Washington to be the greatest man North America has ever seen.

The Washington Reserve Marines, National Guard and a group of sailors participated in the Bicentennial program. Among those on the speaker's platform were prominent officials in all services. Dr. Frederick V. Fisher, pastor, presided.

WASHINGTON ESSAYS WILL SWAMP EDITOR

tive through its George Washington Essay Contest to examine into the character of Washington. On all sides I hear of the most enthusiastic participation in the contest by students and many children of federation members have entered it.

"Therefore, we feel a particular interest in the outcome of the contest. In permitting the children to select any phase of Washington's career which most appeals to them, there is a wider scope and more chance for originality of thought and comment than if they were confined to one general subject. For instance, the younger children naturally understand the career of Washington as a boy, while high school students will be attracted to his statesmanship and career as President and Constitution maker, perhaps.

"The Washington Post has my hearty support in its Washington Essay Contest."

Contestants are reminded that only about three weeks now remain before their essays must be entered, as the contest will close at midnight on March 14. The Post Essay editor states that all those who have completed their essays are requested to file them as soon as possible at The Washington Post, in order that they may be sorted into age groups for submission to the judges.

HOOVER JOINS IN HOMAGE

drawn together by the universality of reverence for the First President.

Escorted Through Churchyard.

President and Mrs. Hoover went to Alexandria from the White House early yesterday by automobile, and upon their arrival, were escorted through the churchyard, studded with stones marking the graves of Washington's compatriots. They were then led to the pew which Washington occupied as a member of the church.

The Chief Executive and Mrs. Hoover, listened with rapt attention to a sermon of Dr. Berryman Green, former dean of the Virginia Theological Seminary, who pleaded for a recognition of George Washington not "as a man faultless but bloodless," but as one with a warm heart—a man of temper but of stainless integrity and unflinching determination.

"Praise has concealed rather than revealed Washington's greatness," he said. "We have bowed so low that we have not seen the real man." He praised the First President for his wisdom in seeking the counsel of his political enemies in order to form proper decisions and avowed that Washington had gathered about him "the ablest group of advisors with which any President ever surrounded himself."

President to Speak at Noon.

In a prayer that preceded the sermon, the Rev. William Jackson Morton, pastor of the church, called for a blessing "to the President of the United States," and, bowing toward the Chief Executive, Dr. Morton remarked upon his presence and added, "We hope he shall visit us many more times in the same office."

Shortly before noon today President and Mrs. Hoover will leave the White House to go to the Capitol to take part in the Washington commemorative service to be held at a joint session of Congress in the House of Representatives, where at noon President Hoover will deliver his George Washington address.

In the House will be gathered the Cabinet, members of the United States Supreme Court, members of Congress, diplomats, governors of several States and high officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The joint session will be called at 11:30 o'clock by Speaker Garner.

Vice President Curtis will preside at the combined session of the Senate and House. After his address President Hoover will be escorted to the east plaza, where at 12:45 outdoor exercises will be held, and he will give the signal for the singing of "America" by the thousands that will congregate.

Historic Pohick Church.

In the ancient walls of the old Pohick Church, which was as intimately connected with the life of George Washington as Mount Vernon, Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the United States Bicentennial Commission, yesterday afternoon broadcast an appeal to the Nation for a "return to the wisdom, character and courage of Washington and to his calm faith in the God of human destiny."

In the old church that Washington attended as a vestryman, and within the walls which were designed by Washington, Representative Bloom pleaded for a "new consecration to that morality which guides and stimulate the acts of our daily lives. We need a devotion that surmounts difficulties that overcomes opposition, that triumphs in the relationship of man with man."

Services at Cathedral.

At a Bicentennial commemorative service in the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral, Bishop James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, cited the spiritual ideal of and principles of Washington in founding the republic as the strongest bulwarks of defense against the forces now threatening the stability of the American Nation and its institutions.

In old St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va., the Rev. Richard B. Washington, of Hot Springs, Va., collateral descendant of George Washington, was the celebrant at a Bicentennial mass at 11 o'clock, which was attended by the Most Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate, and several members of the Catholic hierarchy.

St. Mary's Church, had as its principal founder the closest link between the Roman Catholic Church and George Washington, Col. John Fitzgerald, the secretary and aid-de camp of Washington during the Revolutionary War. The traditions of the parish have it that Washington was present at a dinner at which the project of founding the parish was begun.

The Rev. T. A. Rankin, pastor of the church, was in charge of the ceremonies. The Rev. Peter Guilday, of Catholic University, preached the sermon.

The climax to the day's activities was last night in Constitution Hall, where the folk masque "Wakefield" was presented before a crowd that jammed the hall to the doors. The masque, named after the humble birthplace of Washington, portrayed in symbolic form the story of the life of Washington. More than 500 children and adults took part in the production.

Will Review Parade.

After the services at the Capitol plaza, the President will return to the White House, and early in the afternoon, accompanied by the Bicentennial Commissions, he will start for Mount Vernon to lay a wreath at the tomb of Washington. En route, he will stop at Alexandria, to review a part of the Bicentennial parade to be held there.

He will be accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Hoover, Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Dolly Gann, Speaker and Mrs. Garner and members of his Cabinet and their wives. After placement of the wreath, President Hoover will make a brief address from the veranda of Mount Vernon to a group of educators gathered on the lawn.

Upon his return to the White Houses, the President will climax his day's activities by pressing a button at 5:56, which will open the new George Washington Memorial Bridge across Lake Union, at Seattle.

Scores of Services Slated.

Scores of patriotic and military societies will hold services during the day, many of which will be at the Washington Monument and at Mount Vernon. The Pan-American Union will hold special services at its building at 11 o'clock today, which will be addressed by Secretary of State Stimson.

One of the more colorful ceremonies of the day will be at 9 o'clock this morning in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, where the annual military mass of the District Department of the American Legion will be held. The celebrant of the mass will be the Rev. Richard B. Washington, a lineal descendant of the brother of George Washington.

Twenty members of the Costello and Victory Posts of the American Legion, in uniforms and steel helmets, will act as ushers. Marines from Quantico will form a guard of honor during the mass. The call for the massing of the colors will be sounded by Bugler Arthur Thomas.

ORDER OF EXERCISES AT THE EAST FRONT OF UNITED STATES CAPITOL

This Afternoon at 12:45 o'Clock.

Assemblage called to order by Dr. George C. Havenner, executive vice chairman of the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

The executive vice chairman will present Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, chairman of the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission, who will preside.

Arrival of the President of the United States. "Hail to the Chief." Massed bands of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, conducted by Lieut. Comdr. John Philip Sousa.

"America." At a signal given by the President the entire assemblage will join in the singing of "America." A national and international radio hook-up will make possible the simultaneous singing of this hymn all over the United States and abroad. Chief among the singing units will be 10,000 Washington school children and an adult chorus of 2,000. Conductor, Dr. Walter Damrosch. Accompaniment by the massed bands of United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The program will be broadcast on coast-to-coast networks of the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System, and will be transmitted around the world from the short-wave stations of these systems. The exercises also will be broadcast by Station WJSV.

Address of welcome, Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president, Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Address, James M. Beck, member of Congress from Pennsylvania.

Solo, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" (Bland). By Clifton A. Woodrum, member of Congress from Virginia. Accompaniment by the United States Army Band.

Song, "To Thee, O Country" (Eichberg). Sung by school children from divisions 10 to 13, Washington public schools and other schools. Conductor, Prof. A. H. Johnson. Accompaniment by the United States Navy Band, Lieut. Charles Benter, leader.

"George Washington Bicentennial March" (Sousa). Massed bands of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, conducted by Lieut. Comdr. Sousa.

"The Star-Spangled Banner." The assemblage, led by Dr. E. N. C. Barnes. Accompaniment by the United States Marine Band, Capt. Taylor Branson, leader.

75,000 Visitors Expected Here for Celebration Today

Crowds Doubled at Monument, Lincoln Memorial and Other Points of Interest; Highways Jammed With Cars; Hotels Report Heavy Reservations.

The great influx of visitors for the Bicentennial celebration became apparent yesterday as crowds doubled at the Washington Monument, Lincoln Memorial, and other points of historical interest.

According to William H. Lohmar, custodian of the Monument, the steady stream of visitors totaled 2,230. Of this group, 810 chose the more difficult method of climbing the steps of the 555-foot shaft, while the majority of the visitors took the elevator. This is practically double the usual Sunday crowd.

The Lincoln Memorial also had a large number of visitors, 400 viewing the statue of the emancipator within the space of half an hour during the afternoon. Park police stationed at the entrance of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway kept the steady stream of traffic moving in the congested area of the Memorial.

The traffic over the highway numbered 20,000 cars, reaching a peak at 4 p. m., with a detail of 50 police stationed along the road to regulate traffic. According to Capt. Ray C. Montgomery, of the Park Police, this volume of traffic is not unusual for a Sunday afternoon.

Estimates of the size of the crowds expected in the city today place the approximate number at 75,000 visitors, and a steady stream of new arrivals is reported at the Union Station. Special and excursion rates continue to attract a large number of travelers. About 25,000 arrived yesterday by railroad.

Capt. Montgomery said last night "We have no way to make an accurate estimate of the number of visitors, but there is every indication of crowds equaling those during the big days of the 'cherry blossom' festival."

Hotels report an almost capacity booking and are not accepting any room reservations for this week. The accommodations registered with the Bicentennial Commission will probably be called upon to provide housing, if arrivals continue.

Buenos Aires Hop Waits on Weather

Nate Browne Arrives at Old Orchard Ready to Seek Record.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—A veteran flier, Nate C. Browne, tonight hastened to prepare his second-hand monoplane for its proposed nonstop flight to Buenos Aires—all the while hoping for favorable weather reports.

Browne came here about mid-afternoon from the Portland Airport at Scarboro, where he left his plane last night after a four-hour flight from New York. With him was Edward Muldowney, of New York and Scranton, Pa., who, according to a dispatch from Scranton might be the "wealthy sportsman" reported backing the flight.

Browne hopes to beat the long distance record set last summer by John Polando and Russell Boardman in their flight from New York to Istanbul, Turkey. It was reported Muldowney might make the flight with Browne.

French Thought Theme In Bicentennial Tribute

Paris, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The influence of French thought on American revolutionary leaders was stressed tonight at the Sorbonne by Norman Armour, counsellor of the American Embassy, on the eve of the bicentenary of George Washington.

President Paul Doumer, fatigued by the cabintt crisis, sent a naval aide to represent him at the celebration. Brazilian Ambassador Souza Dantas hailed Washington as a chevalier of liberty. American Ambassador Walter E. Edge, who has gone to America, wirelessed his regrets.

16 Hospital Patients Saved in Fire.

Detroit, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Sixteen patients were carried to safety today when fire threatened to destroy the General Hospital in suburban Dearborn. The hospital, of 35-bed capacity, occupied a converted three-story residence. Two floors were destroyed.

WASHINGTON IDEALS HELD NATION'S HOPE

Safeguard Against Evils of Present Day, Episcopal Bishop Declares.

The spiritual ideals and principles of George Washington in founding the republic were declared by Bishop James E. Freeman at Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon to be the strongest bulwark of defense against the forces now threatening the stability of the American Nation and its institutions.

Preaching at a notable Bicentennial commemorative service in the Bethlehem Chapel, Bishop Freeman said that unless the American people put into practice the standards laid down by Washington, the celebration of this anniversary will be without real meaning or value. He added this commemoration, held in the present period of troubled times, will bring forth the realization that the first President put his trust upon religion and high ideals rather than in "the mere accumulation of riches and strength of arms" as the foundation for the security and stability of the Nation.

"We shall only bring further confusion to our present distracted country," Bishop Freeman emphasized, "if we at this time acclaim with high praise the valorous deeds of Washington and forget his ringing call to patriotic unselfish service that involves sacrifice in the maintenance of those ideals. If we would continue as a Nation, we must do more than chronicle the names of our patriots in bronze and marble, we must make their principles vital forces in the life of our time."

The United States has learned "at frightful cost," Bishop Freeman said, "that true attainment can not be purchased in the market places of the world and we have been sobered by the stern events of the recent world." He added the world must now realize that religion is the indispensable and stabilizing element in private and public life.

"Fundamentally and essentially Washington was a deeply religious man," Bishop Freeman continued. "Even those who have studied his life most critically have not denied him this distinction. His reverence for God and his devotion to spiritual ideals are conspicuous in the record of his public and private life. He weighed issues, reached decisions and acted in accordance with the dictates of his conscience. To him, love of country was necessarily related to love of God. His relation to the church was intimate and at times official. At Pohick and Alexandria he served with singular fidelity on vestries and the story of his relation to these respective parishes discloses his deep and unfailing interest in the essential place the church occupies in corporate and individual life.

"No study of his career nor of the motives that governed him is adequate or consistent that leaves out of consideration the strong religious impulses that governed and controlled him. To his mind religion was the indispensable and stabilizing element in private and public life. The need for emphasizing this today has never been greater."

In concluding, Bishop Freeman declared that "no unhallowed or alien hands shall deflect us from our course as we proudly turn to Washington who, trusting in God, gave us our chart and set our prow in those deep and secure channels that must ultimately bring us to the haven where we would be."

At the morning service in Bethlehem Chapel, The Rev. Will L. DeVries, precentor of the cathedral, gave a notable commemorative tribute to the spiritual life of Washington and described the function of Washington Cathedral "in perpetuating his memory and in keeping his ideals in the hearts and lives of Americans." In the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea a special service was held in the morning for 100 members of the New Jersey Order of the De Molay, with a sermon on Washington by Canon Edward S. Dunlap of the Cathedral.

Germans Pay Memorial Tribute to War Dead

Berlin, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Church bells tolled and flags were half-staffed today in recognition of "reminiscence Sunday," a national day of mourning for Germany's 2,000,000 war dead.

President von Hindenburg attended a solemn memorial service with Chancellor Bruening and other officials in the black-draped plenary hall of the Reichstag. Speakers at Nationalist gatherings emphasized the nation's determination to restore its former glory.

SONS OF REVOLUTION HONOR WASHINGTON

Rev. Ze Barney Phillips Leads Services; Bishop Strider Gives Address.

The Sons of the Revolution held commemorative exercises for George Washington yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G street northwest, at which the Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of West Virginia, delivered a sermon on Washington. This was one of the official opening services of the Bicentennial.

The services were conducted by the Revs. Ze Barney T. Phillips, rector of the Epiphany Church; George W. Atkinson, rector of St. James' Church, and Alvin Lamar Wills and Francis Yarnall, both of the Church of the Epiphany. The commemoration address was delivered by Dr. Thomas Edward Green, president of the Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Strider, in his address, "The Genius of George Washington," said that through Jesus, and through the great geniuses who have drunk deeply of His spirit, the world is also slowly coming to value human personality more and more highly. Democracy, for example, is a vast gigantic delusion unless founded on the belief that not merely the rich and the nobly born, but the common man with all his handicaps and limitations, possesses precious and intrinsic value.

Mr. Strider said that he liked to think that this basic idea of Jesus found fresh substantiation in the mind and character of George Washington.

Washington possessed amazing faith in human nature, and is often denominated an aristocrat, the speaker said. There was about him a personal reserve, a sort of statelliness, which made him seem at times cold and distant. Yet no man ever valued friends or trusted them more than he. The treason of Benedict Arnold was a blow to the American cause, but more serious than that was the effect of it on Washington, Mr. Strider asserted.

But beyond the range of his personal friendships, he believed in the noble possibilities of human nature, he continued. It lay at the basis of his entire political philosophy, and he believed that the masses in a democracy stood in need of the strong leadership of choice individuals as well as education.

Germans to Honor Washington.

Galveston, Tex., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—About 200 officers and men of the German cruiser Karlsruhe will participate in a military parade here tomorrow in celebration of Washington's birthday. The cruiser has been in port for several days. It sails Tuesday for the Canal Zone.

PHILADELPHIA GOES TO COLONIAL PULPITS

Churches Where Washington Worshipped Mark His Bicentennial.

Philadelphia, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—In the old-fashioned, colonial churches where George Washington worshipped in Philadelphia during the dark times of the Revolution and during his happier days as President of the United States, Philadelphia centered its celebration of his 200th birthday anniversary today.

Solemn strains from the same old organ which Washington listened to in old Christ Protestant Episcopal Church during his presidential years, from 1790 to 1797, recalled memories of "the Father of his Country" as a large congregation of city officials, patriotic societies and military and civic organizations sang hymns of Washington's day and used the same prayers he recited.

And in old St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, in whose high, inclosed family pews Washington sat for divine worship in that bitter winter when his troops suffered at Valley Forge, were many prominent Philadelphians, descendants of families which worshipped beside Washington in that same church.

Brilliant full-dress uniforms and sabers, the same as those worn by the proud first troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, when Washington served as the troop's first captain, were worn by present members of the organization.

Other recollections of Washington included services at old Zion Lutheran Church, where Congress attended Memorial services at Washington's death. It was in that church that Gen. "Lighthorse Harry" Lee eulogized his Revolutionary War comrade in arms as "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Throughout the city, other churches, religious, patriotic, civic and military organizations honored Washington with parades, sermons and oratory.

Praise of Washington as a deeply religious man mingled with denunciation of modern historians who aim to "debunk" histories of Washington.

"Only pseudo-historians and literary ghouls, who live on the reputations of the dead," said Dr. Edward M. Jeffreys, pastor of old Christ's Church, "would say that Washington had no religion."

"Washington took a little wine for his stomach's sake, as St. Paul teaches," the pastor said, "I am all the more satisfied that Washington was not the prig and prude, as shown in primary school books. He appreciated the amenities of life, but also was at home in the great primeval forest. He used emphatic language, sometimes too emphatic, perhaps. He loved peace, but also was a good fighter. He found something charming in the sound of a bullet. He was the ideal Christian gentleman."

DR. GUILDAY PRAISES WASHINGTON'S FAITH

Bicentennial Preacher Pays Founder Tribute at Mass Celebrated by Kin.

"It has been justly observed that of all our statesmen none has so consciously walked in the presence of God as did George Washington," said Dr. Peter Guilday, professor of church history at the Catholic University of America, preaching yesterday in St. Mary's Church, in Alexandria, at a special Bicentennial service.

Mass at the church was celebrated by the Rev. Richard Blackburn Washington, collateral descendant of George Washington and the Rev. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate, gave the apostolic blessing.

"There is a stateliness about his diction when he speaks of Almighty God which is seldom heard in our day, and no man can mistake the profound reverence of the heart which voiced its faith in such phrases as the Great Arbiter of the Universe, the Omnipotent and Supreme Being, Sovereign Ruler of the Nation; God, Our Benign Parent, Divine Munificence, and the words which occur the most, Divine Providence," Dr. Guilday said.

"Nowhere is this fact seen to better advantage than in his reply to the different religious congregations and communities which addressed him in felicitation during the first year of his Presidency.

No Deceit in Worship.

"In all this there was no deceit, no pretense. Washington was never ostentatious in his profession of belief in God or in his devotional life. But that deep abiding sense of dependence upon the Creator is visible in all his public utterances. His early education, his pioneer days in the wilderness of the frontier, his life in the mountains, along the streams and under the stars, begot in him an honest, forthright, religious sincerity and humanity which places him apart from the other founders of our republic.

"Washington's first official act as President, after taking the oath of office on April 30, 1789, was to bow down reverently and to kiss the Bible upon which his hand rested while Chancellor Livingston read the oath. That same day in his first inaugural address to Congress, without any misgivings or faltering, he avowed publicly that the rise of the American republic was due to the divine stream of providential design for the betterment of the human race, and he stressed the necessity of our realizing that the preservation of the republic depended upon 'the indissoluble union between virtue and happiness, between duty and advantage, between the genuine maxims of an honest and magnanimous policy, and the solid rewards of public prosperity and felicity.'

Honorable in All Actions.

"He warned his listeners that 'the propitious smiles of heaven can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal duties of order and right, which heaven itself has ordained.'

"Honorable in all his actions, Washington never failed to refer to Almighty God, to Divine Providence, to heaven's assistance, to the source of all public and private blessings, to the great governor of the universe—the phrases are all his own—whatever success came to him in the performance of those duties which patriotic love of country had placed upon his shoulders.

"Time moves swiftly, and our children will be holding in solemn manner less than a score of years from now the 150th anniversray of Washington's death, as we today are joyfully celebrating the bicentennial of his birth. To them, as to all succeeding generations, the dominant thought will then be, as it is today with ourselves, whence came this man's greatness?

"The ideal patriot, the supremely model citizen of our republic, the founder of a government which 'changed mankind's ideas of political greatness,' wherein lies the secret of his heroism, of the noble symmetry of his life?

Must Understand Faith.

"It is a secret not hard to discover. If, honestly and sympathetically, we search the records of Washington's life we shall find that it is fundamentally his sincere dependence upon Almighty God and his love for his fellowmen. We are not inclined in these days to dwell much upon the religious motives which dominated the careers of our great leaders, and yet, without understanding Washington's Christian faith, his whole life becomes an enigma.

"Higher than all, nobler than all, stands Virginia's greatest son, the victorious leader and founder of our republic, the first and noblest of all our Presidents, George Washington. As we honor him today in this most sacred of all religious ceremonies, we dedicate anew our lives to that idealism which has placed us above the peoples of the earth and to that sincere patriotism which the life and the achievements of Washington have taught to every generation of Americans down the century and a half of our national existence," Dr. Guilday concluded.

The Rev. T. A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Church, presided at the services. Twenty-five visiting priests occupied seats in the sanctuary. The procession for the mass started from the rectory, led by a number of marines from Quantico.

'Wakefield Masque' Plays To Audience of Thousands

Festival Drama, by Percy MacKaye, With Cast of 500 in Costumes, Is Applauded at Constitution Hall by Throng of Notables.

The "Wakefield Masque," Percy MacKaye's symbolic story of the life of George Washington and the interpretation of the American folk movement, was presented last night in Constitution Hall to a distinguished audience led by Vice President Curtis and prominent figures in the Capital's political and social life.

For slightly more two two hours the festival drama held the stage, evoking from the audience, that overflowed the seating capacity of the auditorium, gasps of admiration of the elaborate costuming of its cast of more than 500, and warm applause for its effective tableaux and clever lighting arrangements.

The theme of the masque is extremely difficult to follow unless the auditor makes liberal use, beforehand, of the program in which a synopsis of the masque and its 33 actions are outlined. The production approaches history, not from the idea of realism, but symbolism, and it expresses its vast theme in symbols of folk legendry.

The central character of the masque is Wakefield, played by Margaret Anglin. In the prologue the chorus of the ages voices the dramatic theme of the masque—the conflict between the Will of Freedom, symbolized by the Spirit of Washington, and Drift, symbolized by the muddled Fog Spirits.

To the pealing of chimes and drums, the Spirit of Washington, played by the Rev. Earle Wilfley, emerges from the audience, casting his mystic shadow on the Rock and passes into the Rock. Wakefield emerges from the hollow of the great Cedar and soon Folk-Say, played by Robert Chase enters.

Brave, the part played by Harry Schonrank, enters with Folk-Say, and is welcomed by Free, played by Hugo Schulze. They recount how driven from the Old World by poverty and persecution, they had lost each other in the wilderness. Wakefield called her explorers to lead them to America.

Then The Heroes of the Venture enter in pageant. All the new world explorers come upon the stage, typifying, Columbus, Amerigo Vespucci, La Salle, the Cabots, Henrick Hudson and Sir Walter Raleigh. Then Free's pipe summons the folk sprites of America, the nucleus of American Folk Mythology.

The characters are: Paul Bunyan, the Giant logger, toting his blue calf; Solomon Shell, of the Kentucky mountains; Rip Van Winkle, his hunting dog; Ghost Gnome, of Hendrik Hudson's crew, carrying his ale keg; gaunt Ichabod Crane and the Headless Horseman of Sleepy Hollow, and other characters of American mythology.

Then come the pioneers, including Davy Crockett, of Tennessee; Daniel Boone, of Kentucky; Brigham Young, of Utah; Ethan Allen, of the Green Mountains, and other famous American pioneers. Then three other expressions of folk life, symbolized by Shakespeare, Magna Charta and the Bible, in processionals from the auditorium, and their tokens of Art, Justice and Religion are welcomed by Wakefield.

Then Wakefield begins the tale of Washington's birthnight, then conflict ensues. Through all the aisles of the auditorium, thirteen processionals enter, singing their own folk and cradle songs, in their several languages, typifying the coming of the other nations to America. All of these join in the folk song of America, "The Old Folks at Home."

Wakefield welcomes them all home. Then a swift moving series of tableaux is revealed, showing the principal events in the life of Washington: Washington Crossing the Delaware, Washington at Valley Forge, Washington at the Framing of the Constitution, and Washington on His Farm at Mount Vernon.

The majestic cloaked figure of Washington appears high on a cleft of rock, silhouetted against the Dawn and Washington speaks to the Folk-Circle of the World, and the Four Winds peal their trumpets, as the entire assembly joins in a new stanza of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

At the conclusion of the masque Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the U. S. Bicentennial Commission, warmly praised the efforts of the cast and the work of Mr. MacKaye. "It is the best amateur show I have ever witnessed," Mr. Bloom said. "The performance was all the more remarkable because the presentation was made after but two rehearsals.

"In spite of this," he said, "it was as good as any professional performance I have ever witnessed. The acting of the cast was worthy of the city, and more so, because with the exception of one person, all the actors are residents of the Capital."

Kensington Holds Washington Fete

Senator Dill Is Speaker at Event Attended by 1,100.

Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington State, was the principal speaker at a George Washington Bicentennial celebration yesterday afternoon at the National Guard Armory in Kensington, Md. He was introduced by Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland.

The celebration was attended by about 1,100. Among them was George Peter, of Kensington, a great-great-grandson of Martha Washington. He wore a silver eagle badge originally owned by Gen. Washington. The badge was sent by Martha Washington to her great-grandson, John Park Custis Peter, to be handed down to the eldest son in each generation.

The program was opened with a concert by the University of Maryland Band. The invocation was given by the Rev. Fred A. Kullmar. Dr. Robert H. Jarmon directed the George Washington University Glee Club in the rendition of several numbers, with Mrs. Harmon accompanying. A George Washington pageant, "Mother and Son," was given by the students of the Kensington Grammar School. William Tyler Page recited the American Creed, of which he is the author. The Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, pastor of St. John's Church, Forest Glenn, gave the benediction.

Washington Tribute Is Planned in Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The bicentennial of the birth of Washington will be commemorated here tomorrow by the placing of flowers on the Monument of Friendship given to the people of Brazil by the people of the United States.

American Commercial Attache Carlton Jackson will address a group of his countrymen at luncheon in a local hotel.

Boy Badly Hurt by Taxicab.

Joseph Turner, colored, 10 years old, of 1118 North Capitol street, is in a critical condition in Freedman's Hospital with a fractured skull, fractured jaw and compound fracture of the right ankle, received when he was pinned between a taxicab and a tree at North Capitol and K streets. James W. Faber, driver of the cab, was not held.

Shotgun Disables Woman's Annoyer

Husband Wields Weapon as Club When Wife Is Pursued.

A man who refused to give police any information about himself except that his name was "Smith" was brought to Casualty Hospital last night to be treated for lacerations of the head, received when he was bludgeoned with a shotgun wielded by Joseph Carrick at the latter's home in Brandywine, Md.

According to Sergt. A. W. Hepburn, of the Prince Georges County police, Smith started to chase Mrs. Marie Carrick when she walked by the car in which he was seated. She called her husband, who came to his porch with a shotgun and told Smith to stop. He continued the pursuit, however, and Carrick fired, missing him.

The woman then ran into the house and closed the screen door. Smith crashed through the door without opening it, and was struck over the head by Carrick, who had also entered. After treatment Smith was discharged from the hospital.

Earl Carroll Facing Loss of New Theater

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Earl Carroll, producer of Broadway extravaganzas, may be forced to quit the new 3,000-seat theater bearing his name. Joseph L. Greenberg, attorney for a corporation owning the theater and its site, said today that Carroll has until March 1 to pay three months in back rent, taxes and interest.

Carroll said he was planning to move his current production to another theater next week. He blamed the "unreasonable" cost of temporary financing for his difficulties.

Permission has been granted by the president of the Rebekah Assembly of Virginia, Mrs. Lillian V. Cunningham, to the Clarendon Rebekah Lodge, No. 28, changing its meeting scheduled for this evening to February 29.

RADIO TAKES WORDS FROM POHICK PULPIT

Bloom Tells Significance of Edifice Where Washington Worshiped.

Speaking on a Nation-wide network over the Columbia Broadcasting System from the pulpit of the Pohick Church, Virginia, Representative Sol Bloom told the congregation and those listening on the air of the work George Washington accomplished in establishing the church, and of the many historic landmarks revered by the Nation because of their association with the First President.

"Pohick Church occupies a site directly upon the highway between Washington and Richmond. It is located about three miles beyond where the old road branches off from the highway to Mount Vernon. Within the churchyard, surrounded by a brick wall, there is about an acre and a half of ground in which are the tombs of parishioners of long ago," Representative Bloom said in his description of place of worship attended by the early colonists.

New Consecration Needed.

"To Americans everywhere," he said, "I would that I had the power of bringing you in spirit to my side. To Americans everywhere I would that they could feel this sacred presence as I feel it now. To the hearts of all humanity I would convey the meaning of this place and this moment that we could all unite in a common impulse to our God; to a sense of that ancient neighborly friendliness which was actually part of the old-time religion.

"I would that we could join together in the simple hymns they sang; be impressed by the devotions of their day and to dedicate ourselves to the sincerity, the simplicity of their lives.

"We need it now, fellow Americans. We need a return not only to the wisdom, the courage and the character of George Washington, but we need a return to his calm faith in the God of human destiny. We need a new consecration to that morality which guides and stimulates the acts of our daily lives. We need a devotion that surmounts difficulties, that overcomes opposition, that triumphs in the relationship of men with men.

"The lessons of this hour are the lessons of simplicity, the lessons of childlike faith, the lessons of the immortality of the soul. Mark it well, lest we forget, lest we forget!

Echoes of Ancient Sermons.

"I seem to feel, as George Washington felt, the influence of all those great sermons that were preached here by men of God. I seem to feel that from every word they spoke there continues an echo that swells into a glorious chorus of Divine praise. Here the greatest American found companionship with God. Here he received those sacraments that strengthened his character, steadied his purpose and fitted him for the momentous part he played in the epic drama of his time. And there at beautiful Mount Vernon, a few miles away; he sleeps beside his beloved Martha, to the requiem of immortal adulation of all mankind.

"This is God's house, and here we know we are close to our Creator, and, as we go hence, a grand recessional of the ancient faith must ring always in our hearts.

"Reluctantly I turn to go. The spell is still upon me. In this midwinter afternoon the shadows gather early and as I slowly walk toward the world and its concerns, the words of that sweet poem come back to me with a new revelation of truth: 'Standeth God within the shadows, keeping watch above His own.'"

Knights Templar Guests At Alexandria Church

The Second Presbyterian Church, of Alexandria, the Rev. Dr. William B. McIlhaine, pastor, held a special service last night in the old First Presbyterian Church on South Fairfax street, in compliment to the Knights Templar.

There was a word of welcome by the pastor followed by a response by Harry K. Green, grand master of Masons in Virginia; the introduction of the speakers by Charles H. Callahan, past grand master of Masons in Virginia; an address by James H. Price, past grand master of Masons in Virginia and lieutenant governor of Virginia, and now grand commander of the Virginia District Knights Templar; and a sermon by the Rev. John C. Palmer, D. D., grand chaplain of the grand lodge of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Coleman on Program.

Mrs. Edna Coleman, past president of the League of American Pen Women, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Ashton Heights Woman's Club tomorrow evening in the clubhouse. Mrs. Coleman will speak on, "The Birthplace of George Washington."

VIRGINIA'S STATUES NOT YET ACCEPTED

Action Overlooked 12 Years by U. S.; Woodrum to Ask Correction Today.

(Associated Press.)

Although Virginia's statues of George Washington and Robert E. Lee have been in the Capitol's Statuary Hall more than a dozen years, the Government has not yet formally accepted them.

This disclosure was made yesterday by Representative Woodrum, of Roanoke, Va., who came upon the information accidentally. Today, the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth, Woodrum will introduce a resolution to correct the oversight. He pointed out the acceptance was not absolutely essential, but in a majority of cases the Government has accepted these gifts of statues at appropriate exercises.

The statues—bronze castings of originals of Washington by Houdoun and Lee by Edward V. Valentine, of Richmond—were placed there under an act of 1864, in which Congress invited every State of the Union to furnish statues of citizens "illustrious for their historic renown."

The Virginia statues were placed in Statuary Hall in August, 1909. Correspondence on file in the office of the architect of the Capitol shows that arrangements for their placement were made by Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, then a State senator and now a circuit judge.

"It seems particularly appropriate," Woodrum said, "after the belated delay in this matter, that this resolution should be introduced on the 200th anniversary of the birth of Washington.

"It is my purpose, at an opportune time, to ask for consideration of the resolution, and upon its adoption to make arrangements for fitting ceremonies in Statuary Hall, when the Governor of Virginia and other leading officials and citizens of the State will be invited to participate."

Woodrum said he had particular interest in the matter because Washington and Lee University is his alma mater.

WASHINGTON LAUDED BY EDUCATION GROUP

Speakers at Church Service Pay Tribute; Will Visit Mt. Vernon Today.

Participation of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association in the opening of the George Washington Bicentennial will be in the form of a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon this afternoon, where wreaths will be laid on the tomb of George Washington by President Hoover and Edwin C. Broome, president of the Department of Superintendence, and on the tomb of Martha Washington by Florence Hale, president of the National Education Association.

President Hoover will extend greetings to the superintendents and William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools at Chicago, Ill., will make make the principal address for the department. The ceremony will be broadcast by Station WRC, marking the first time that a radio program will be broadcast from the Washington home.

At the hour of George Washington's birth, 10:15 o'clock this morning, the superintendents, in session at Constitution Hall, will rise, give the pledge of allegiance to the flag and sing "America." The singing will be led by E. N. C. Barnes, director of music in the Washington public schools. Many of the delegates will attend the George Washington Bicentennial convocation of George Washington University tonight.

The superintendents made patriotic pilgrimages yesterday to the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial and attended a service at old Christ Church in Alexandria, Va. The school officials also visited the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

Tributes Paid Washington.

Making the principal address at the service at Old Christ Church, Herbert S. Weet, superintendent of schools at Rochester, N. Y., told the superintendents that "to us is coming with increasing clearness the conviction that the sole purpose and defense of our free public school system is to realize the fulfillment of the dreams and ambitions of George Washington."

The educators of the country can best pay tribute to Washington "by a quickening of our faith in the great essentials for which Washington stood and a strengthening of our hearts to go forward and realize these essentials in the youth of America," Dr. Weet said.

A wreath was laid at the Washington Monument by President Broome, and one at the Lincoln Memorial by George C. Bush, superintendent of schools at South Pasedena, Calif., second vice president of the Department of Superintendence. Norman R. Crozier, superintendent of schools at Dallas, Tex., and first vice president of the department, laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The radiotone male quartet of Washington sang at all three places.

Vesper Service Is Held.

A vesper service, representing the first general session of the department, was held yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall. Dr. Rufus B. von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California, the principal speaker, addressed the delegates on "Spiritual Values in Education."

He expressed the opinion that at the present time the target of critics of the public school system is the cost of maintenance and operation rather than the expense of instruction. "The cost is high," he said, "but only let us be privileged to do our job alone without the burden of duty undone on the part of other social agencies, and we shall be able readily and in large sums to reduce the cost."

"BE AMERICANS."

The entire world gives thought today to George Washington, founder of the United States. Americans celebrate today the bicentenary of his birth, and will signalize the Bicentennial year by innumerable memorial ceremonies throughout the republic.

Of what avail are eulogies of George Washington, if Americans forget or ignore the advice and warnings uttered by the Father of His Country—advice and warnings which must be heeded if the United States is to avoid wars arising from foreign entanglements?

The present-day American who holds that present conditions have changed political truths or altered human nature is indulging in the fatal folly of setting himself up as superior in wisdom to George Washington, whose knowledge of political truth and insight into human nature were such as to enable him to lay the foundations of the greatest nation in the history of the world. Is it not a day and a year for drawing inspiration from Washington, with a resolve to abide by his advice, rather than to spurn his admonitions while rendering empty homage to his name?

Not long ago there came to light a letter written by Gen. Washington to his friend William Heath, major general in the Continental Army, dated at Mount Vernon, May 27, 1797. This letter reiterates the convictions expressed in the Farewell Address, which had been written a few months before. An extract from the letter to Gen. Heath reads as follows:

> I hope, as you do, that notwithstanding our Political horizon is more overcast the wisdom, temper and firmness of the Government (supported by the great mass of the People) will dispel the threatening clouds, and that all will end without the shedding of Blood. To me, this is so demonstrable that not a particle of doubt would dwell on my mind relative thereto if our Citizens would advocate their own cause instead of that of any other Nation under the Sun; that is, instead of being Frenchmen, or Englishmen, in Politics, they would be Americans, indignant at every attempt of these or any other power to establish an influence in our Councils, or that should presume to sow the seeds of distrust, or disunion among ourselves.
> No policy, in my opinion, can be more clearly demonstrated than that we should do justice to all but have no political connexions with any of the European Powers, beyond those which result from and serve to regulate our Commerce with them. Our own experience soon will (if it has not done so already) convince us that disinterested favours, or friendship from any nation whatsoever, is too novel to be calculated upon; and that there will always be found a wide difference between the words and the action of any of them.

THE GRASSHOPPER WAR.

Experts are able to predict grasshopper invasions months in advance. In view of the information that there will be a scourge of them next summer unless precautions are taken, President Hoover has asked Congress for an immediate appropriation of $1,450,000 for the battle against the insects. The struggle must begin before the hoppers outgrow the larvae stage or the loss in crops will run into millions. The ammunition is bran and arsenic, called "branbait" in the Bureau of Entomology. Ten pounds of poison to the acre is the average amount used.

In the fall grasshoppers lay their eggs and if the winter is dry the fertility is retained and the warm sun in the spring does the rest. Wet weather develops a fungus growth which destroys the fertility of the eggs and few of the insects survive. This year's survey shows that the eggs were widespread and fertile to an unusual degree. There were so many grasshoppers last year that in Nebraska great homemade machines known as "bulkers" were used by the farmers to "harvest" the insects instead of crops. The pests were then dumped in piles and burned, in the hope that this year's hordes would be reduced. Grasshoppers, unlike locusts and other similar insects, do not come in cycles, but are influenced by the climatic conditions; so that this dry winter foretells the summer menace.

Bran or molasses mixed with poison has been found most satisfactory in fighting the plague. The insects die within 24 hours after eating the mixture. In anticipation of the appropriation the Bureau of Entomology is already at work preparing a campaign to be carried into the infested area, which includes virtually all the cultivated lands in South Dakota, most of northeastern North Dakota, north central Nebraska, northwestern Minnesota and western Iowa.

THE N. E. A. CONVENTION.

Leading educators from all parts of the country are gathered in Washington for the annual convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association. Throughout this week they will give attention to the educational ideals, achievements and problems of the greatest school system in the world. One may recognize in such a gathering as this one of the cogent factors that tend to shape the life and destiny of America.

It is particularly fitting that this great body of educators should be in session in the Nation's Capital to celebrate the bicentennial of Washington's birth. The spirit of George Washington is enshrined in every American school. Especially during this year is the influence of his character on American youth manifested. In the city that was planned by the First President and named for him, and amid scenes where Washington lived, these thousands of delegates will catch anew his spirit and infuse it throughout the school system.

For other reasons the educators will find Washington an ideal place to converge their interests. This city is a center of educational activity as well as the Nation's Capital. The spiritual and cultural atmosphere, which is coming to play a much larger part in education, is more in evidence here than in most American cities. The N. E. A. is always welcome in Washington, for it contributes to, as well as partakes of, the spirit of educational development.

TAMMANY TACTICS.

The Tammany Tiger is never quite vanquished. When he has been cornered, wounded, and lies defenseless at the mercy of his pursuer, he looks up with appealing eyes and licks the hand that would destroy him. Who can resist such a touching manifestation of innocence?

The contest that is going on between Gov. Roosevelt and Tammany is charged with a high political frequency, yet it is intensely human. Tammany tried defiance, but was openly shamed for graft and corruption. Tammany attempted evasion, but was cornered. Then Tammany officials sought to escape punishment for their profligacy, on the ground that what they do outside of their official duties is their own affair. But Gov. Roosevelt laid down this principle:

> Where a public official is under an inquiry, especially an elected public official, and it appears that his scale of living, or the total of his bank deposits far exceeds the public salary which he is known to receive, he owes a positive public duty to the community to give a reasonable or credible explanation of the source of his deposits.

The case in question is that of Sheriff Farley, owner of the magic tin box in which wealth seems to have multiplied by spontaneous generation. The sheriff has been indicted, along with his predecessor, for diverting to his own use the interest on money entrusted to his official care. Having failed to explain his fabulous bank deposits to Judge Seabury's investigating committee, he was called by Gov. Roosevelt to defend himself against a petition for his dismissal.

At the time Gov. Roosevelt laid down his pattern of rectitude for public officials under his jurisdiction, he indicated that he was dissatisfied with Sheriff Farley's attempts to tell how he became wealthy from a small official salary. But the Tammany leader's last straw was not yet broken. He went immediately to Flower Hospital. In an emotional voice from a sick bed he declares:

> I bear no malice toward the governor. If he is nominated I'll carry on just as intensive a campaign for him as I would for any other candidate. I'm a 100 per cent Democrat.

Even though Gov. Roosevelt strikes him down, the faithful Tammany chief will rise with his wounds and lead the way to the White House.

Gov. Roosevelt is put in an awkward situation, but the overplay of the political element in this drama makes it more imperative, for the governor's own reputation, that he do his duty.

WAGES AND THE TARIFF.

A request by Representative Connery, Democrat, of Massachusetts, that the House investigate wage cutting, especially in industries that are protected by the tariff, is furnishing the antiprotectionists with much-needed ammunition. It must sound strange to workingmen who are trying to cling to their jobs to hear the oracles of free trade advocate the destruction of certain American industries because they have not been able to maintain the same wage scales that prevailed in the heyday of prosperity. But that is the "logic" into which these foes of the tariff have fallen.

Industry in this country is able to pay higher wages than are paid in any other part of the world largely because the American workingman has achieved unprecedented efficiency. The antiprotectionists have developed a curious theory that because the American worker produces more goods per day than does his competitor abroad, there is no connection between the tariff and high wages. But what would become of America's efficient workingmen if the industries that are now supported by the tariff were destroyed by foreign competition?

The very fact that labor in this country is unusually productive makes it necessary to maintain extensive and varied domestic industries to furnish ample employment. One inveterate howler against protection for labor attempts to contrast wages in the protected textile industry with those in "the unprotected railroad industry." Suppose that the tariff on textiles were removed? Would the destruction of this great industry inure to the benefit of American workingmen? Such muddled reasoning is typical of those propagandists who are trying to break down the extensive industrial structure that has been established in this country.

Tariff protection for the railroads is a novelty that has not previously been contemplated. The railroads enjoy a different kind of protection, which in many ways is more complete than any tariff duties. There is no foreign competition against American railroads.

Organized labor knows on which side its bread is buttered. No congressional investigation and no amount of argument by the internationalists will turn the working men of the United States against the policy which gives them jobs that would otherwise be held by cheap foreign labor. The effect of this present period of unemployment and wage cuts will be to strengthen labor's demands for ample tariff protection.

DE VALERA'S VICTORY.

Eamon de Valera's extremist party has captured control of the Irish Free State government. This party, the Fianna Fail, wins upon its pledge to dissolve the political bonds that attach it to the British crown. It will soon be De Valera's duty, in accordance with his pledge, to abolish the oath of allegiance.

The attempt to set up the Irish Free State as an independent republic is a blunder of the first magnitude, so far as the economic welfare of the people is concerned. "Free and independent" is a splendid phrase, fitly describing the goal to which all peoples capable of maintaining independence should aspire. No American worthy of his country can honestly disagree with any people aspiring to self-sustaining independence. But, as in the case of the Philippines, the question of ability to maintain independence arises as a result of De Valera's victory. The Philippines are economically dependent upon the United States, and the Irish Free State is economically dependent upon Great Britain. Practically the only market open to the Free State is the adjacent British market. Now that a protective tariff has been adopted by Britain, it is not to be supposed that special trade advantages will be given to a state that is throwing off its allegiance because of alleged intolerable grievances.

Self-determination on the part of small states incapable of self-sustenance is more likely to lead to misfortune than to happiness. How will the Free State exist? Its expenses will be very heavy if it undertakes to set up all the machinery of an independent government. Its resources are limited. With all the patriotism in the world, a state must still be capable of maintaining itself economically, or its aspirations of independence will be premature and unfortunate.

Eamon de Valera has not manifested the qualities of statesmanship, including the ability to win his point by compromise, which are necessary to the building of a state. He might profit by the wise observation of his great countryman, Edmund Burke:

> All government—indeed, every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act—is founded on compromise and barter.

CHILDREN AND NEWSPAPERS

By PROF. WALTER B. PITKIN, in Parents' Magazine.

No child's education is complete without the newspaper, for through it the child can secure a vivid, realistic picture of life, the world and its affairs. Children pass over the news of crime and the sordid phases of life because they are outside their realm of experience; only when they are admonished not to read crime news do they take an active interest in it.

Until he is about twelve years of age, the child needs no special direction in his newspaper reading, but after that age the parent should aim to stimulate the interest of the child in current affairs. Through discussions of news at the dinner table, the making of scrap books and files of clippings on certain subjects, the child's interest can be directed into constructive channels. Children should early learn the technique of digesting news articles accurately and quickly. They should never dawdle over a paper. But accuracy is by all means the first requisite. And parents can stimulate accurate reading and recall by indulging in current information tests disguised as games.

That children do not learn how to read a newspaper intelligently is evidenced by the appalling ignorance of high school students in current events. I recently studied the results of a simple test in current information taken by several thousand high school students. Ninety per cent of them failed miserably and ignobly. Another 5 per cent did passably well. Not more than 5 per cent of the entire group had even a reasonable grasp of ordinary news events.

The children identified George F. Baker, philanthropist, as everything from a prize fighter to the Secretary of War. They were sure that the Mayor of Chicago was variously a thug, an outlaw, a famous bootlegger and a European statesman. Of a thousand high school students in a Southern city only fifteen knew the name of their mayor.

Teachers and parents have only themselves to blame for such shoddy intellectual equipment. Allowed to do hit-or-miss reading, unsupervised and undirected, never drilled to concentrate, never trained to be accurate, children early acquire these slipshod habits and spend the rest of their lives trying to overcome them.

Intelligent parents have a magnificent opportunity to supplement school training with informal and thereby doubly valuable discussion and study of today's important news. It would be an immensely interesting project for parent and child. It remains for intelligent parents to make the most of the educational possibilities of American newspapers. No one ever has. Perhaps you will.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

(February 22, 1732.)

Two hundred years ago today
They little dreamed who came and went
The import of that glad event.
The neighbors tripped across the way
The usual pretty things to say,
And shared the customary joy
When it was whispered: "It's a boy!"

Perhaps the women flew upstairs,
As even now the women do,
Eager the new-born babe to view,
While men folk, tilted in their chairs,
Smoked long clay pipes and put on airs,
And hoped the lad would grow to be
A credit to his family.

No sign of greatness then foretold
What destiny for him had planned.
I fancy I can see them stand
Before the fireplace, self-controlled,
Toasting the father, as of old:
"Friend Alexander, may this son
Exalt the name of "Washington!"

Two centuries by-gone this occurred!
Now in the light of all we know
That friendly wish of long ago,
Though well-intended, seems absurd.
Of Alexander who'd have heard
In all this busy world's affairs,
But for that new-born babe upstairs?

Who Will Kill the Rabbits That Eat Your Garden?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

NATURE uses one species to hold another in check, but she never permits the strong to exterminate the weak.

Always some remnant of a weak species is preserved, for it is needed to destroy the surplus of some species weaker still.

The large creature that feeds on a small one is a benefactor, for if the small one had no enemies it would soon overrun and consume the earth.

If all fish eggs hatched and the young matured, the seas would soon be filled with squirming creatures so tightly packed that none could swim.

All literate people now know the story of California's lady bugs. A pest from oversea, unchecked by its natural enemies, threatened complete destruction of fruit trees. A world-wide, patient search at last discovered the pest's natural enemy, the lady bug, and the trees were saved. The bugs were hatched under artificial conditions, turned loose in the orchards, and left alone to devour an enemy that all of man's science was unable to conquer.

Other pests would make the earth uninhabitable if man's folly should exterminate the natural enemies that now prevent their increase.

There is a wee hard-shell insect called the pine bark beetle that destroys the largest trees in 30 days. Sometimes it kills a ten-mile forest within a month. Its chief enemy is the yellow-bellied sapsucker, whose sticky tongue explores the beetle's household and destroys him by the million. If there were no woodpeckers, there would be no pines.

Few of man's smaller enemies are more destructive than the cutworm. Left free to multiply, it would quickly devour all vegetation. But nature provides an enemy to subdue it. The parent of the cutworm is a night-flying moth. And the much-maligned screech owl devours an average of 150 female moths in a night, thus accounting for a hatch of 300,000 cutworms.

Rabbits and mice, harmless as they seem, would fill the earth with famine if they had no enemies. One pair of either species, if all of its progeny matured and multiplied in turn, would increase to more than 12,000,000 within three years. They don't multiply that way because they are fodder for owls, hawks and snakes.

Every bird killed means a weakening of man's defense against the insects that threaten his living, and the utter extermination of any insect family might leave man exposed to a greater enemy.

The safest course is to trust nature, regard all life as sacred, destroy only the immediate menace, and leave the whole scheme to Providence until we learn to improve upon it.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

The Dole Is Defeated.

Minneapolis Journal.

Defeat of the La Follette-Costigan bill, for the appropriation of a huge Government fund for relief of the unemployed, serves notice that even the United States Senate, as at present constituted, has come to a realization of the distinction between State duties and obligations and Government duties and obligations.

Succor of the indigent or otherwise unfortunate remains, under the Senate's decision, the concern of the communities, and States, in which these folk reside. Their care continues to be the burden of those who dwell beside them, who know them best.

Which is as it should be. Erection in Washington of the permanent "Dole Bureau," contemplated by the La Follette-Costigan act, would have been a long step along the mistaken road which Britain lately followed to disaster. Permanent bureau? Yes. For, though the defeated bill carried an appropriation for only the present emergency, the dole, once established, would remain a permanent branch of Uncle Sam's vastly complex business. Make no mistake about that.

Opportunity's Tattoo.

Watertown (S. Dak.) Public Opinion.

Judging from the rapidly mounting list of candidates, the knocking on the door of opportunity must sound like a Jap machine gun corps in action.

Mischievous.

Ohio State Journal.

It seems that a man named Smith is accused of putting a chestnut burr under the donkey's tail right at a time the animal was set to a race.

Too Much Free Mail.

Houston Post.

With the deficit of the Postoffice Department continuing to mount, new proposals are brought forth to wipe it out. One is the 3-cent letter rate. Another is cutting down on the air mail service. Another is reduction of pay for postal employes. Still another is for higher rates on publications sent through the mails. Another is putting rural free delivery on a contract basis.

The postal deficit is becoming a serious matter. It may amount to more than $200,000,000 this year. Balancing the department's budget isn't going to be an easy matter. But before any of these measures mentioned above are put into effect the plan of limiting the free service given to Government departments should be tried, and abuse of the franking privilege by members of Congress and other officials stopped.

Government Bureaus.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The President's special message to Congress urging reorganization of governmental bureaus discloses both his conviction as to the advances in efficiency and economy thus obtainable, and also as to the difficulties surrounding the reform. Savings "amounting to millions of dollars annually" are possible, he says, but he predicts opposition from within the bureaus and from interested groups outside. As Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover coined one of his few telling phrases when he described the jumble of governmental offices as a "swamp of bad organization." From Roosevelt's time to our own, consolidations have been proposed, half-heartedly or energetically, but with little result in either case.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Democrat Pays His Respects to Republican Who Wants Perpetual Republican Rule.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter in your column of February 18, from the pen of Mr. Edward D. Lyle, is quite a revelation to us narrow-minded Democrats. He would do away with the time honored rule of two parties, one to watch the other, boot the Democrats out and set up a permanent conservative Republican majority to rule the roost.

And yet, he is very much opposed to a dictator in Italy, paranoiacs in Russia, civil war in Germany and, the will of the majority in America?

Picture a positive "Conservative Republican" rule in America, if possible. The "Conservative Republican" hen hovering her brood of "Conservative Republican Chickens," the hen answering to the chirp of her "Conservative Republican chickens" when they espy the Democratic rooster with his tail feathers pulled out by the "Conservative Republican" hen.

Does Mr. Lyle know the original Wilson reason for the League of Nations or did he like the balance of the herd, stampede into the White House in 1921?

There is no League of Nations in the original sense of the word, because the great man who drew it up has passed on and there are none left who knows or cares enough about it to keep it on its straight and narrow path.

Still, for the past 12 years, the Republicans have managed to keep a commission in Geneva, on some pretext or other, on every important occasion, at every League conference, World Court, Disarmament conference, or what have you?

I see by the latest reports that Japan refuses to accept today's League proposal because it was concurred in by the United States. Why not? "Conservative Republicans" do not wish to belong to the League of Nations. Though curious, they are merely in Geneva looking over the beautiful scenery there. Why then, should Japan accept a proposal when by chance a stray "Conservative Republican" happened to get his finger in the pie?

Why do we write so many "disgraceful" notes to Japan when criticism of notes to Germany prior to the World War has not ceased as yet? The "Conservative Republican" tariff law speaks for itself. Wheat piled up and rotting in the West; the surplus practically given to China or traded to Brazil for coffee; apples and citrus fruits priced too low to pay the grower for gathering; a year's supply of finished products stored in our factories with no market; farm produce too low for the farmer to exist, and seven or eight million men out of work.

And yet, we blame foreign nations forced to retaliation because they can not climb over our "Conservative Republican" tariff wall

W. WALLACE BRACKETT.

Crushing Taxation Deterrent to Return of Prosperity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Roman Empire was ruined, not by high living, but by high taxes, according to economists. The farmers of the empire fled from their lands when taxes made it impossible for them longer to keep their homes. Today the same thing is occurring in America. At every county seat you may see lists of farms for sale for taxes. Unless our national, state and municipal governments are compelled by our people to retrench, to cut the extravagance and waste that have been two of the prime causes of the depression, we can expect a long wait for returning prosperity.

Between 1913 and 1928 the total cost of government increased 300 per cent, growing at the rate of more than twice the rate of gain in national income. In 1913 the per capita cost of government was $30. By 1928 it was $105. The national income in 1929 was $84,000,000,000. It is doubtful if this year it will reach $50,000,000,000. The per capita income for 1932 is estimated at about $400, out of which $105 will have to go to maintain the government. The war brought billions of dollars in wealth to our country. We sold to the world, but, unfortunately, the profits have been concentrated in few hands, while the expenses of the war was spread, directly or indirectly, upon all of our people. THOMAS L. ANDERSON.

Hot Tip to Senator Wheeler—Provide for Free Coinage of Copper.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to suggest an improvement on Senator Wheeler's plan. He advocates the free coinage of silver on the basis of 16 to 1, but why not make it copper? There is a great deal more copper than there is silver and so there could be very much more inflation, and besides he would help the copper industry of his State, which is at present quite depressed. Surely such a friend of the peepul would not deny them all the benefits to be obtained from bimetallism. Let us exhibit the wisdom of the English housewife who, when a stove was advertised that saved half the fuel, said she would take two stoves and save it all. FRANCIS RALSTON WELSH.

Appreciation of Editorial on Japan's Policy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to express my appreciation of the masterly editorial, "Japan's Ultimatum," in The Post this morning and in so doing convey the same opinion of many with whom I have talked.

Your presentation of the situation will surely appeal to all fair-minded people. Being China-born myself, my sympathies are naturally with the Chinese and against the aggressor.

137 TO GET DEGREES AT G. W. U. TONIGHT

Bicentennial Convocation to Bring Together Notable Assemblage.

One hundred and thirty-seven degrees will be conferred by the George Washington University upon graduates of its college, schools and divisions at the Bicentennial convocation at 8 o'clock tonight in Constitution Hall. Admission will be by ticket only, and all seats are reserved.

Especially dedicated to the patriot whose name the institution bears and in furtherance of whose hope it was founded, the ceremonies will bring together an academic assemblage representative of 300 American colleges and universities in all parts of the country and of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, now in session here.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university and chairman of the District of Columbia Bicentennial Commission, will deliver the address. The conferring of honorary degrees upon 23 graduates of the university who have achieved distinction in several fields will be a special feature of the occasion.

A program of organ music by John Russell Mason, of the faculty, featuring colonial airs, will open the convocation. At 8 p. m. the academic procession will enter the hall, led by the university marshal, with the president, trustees and faculties, representatives of the participating institutions, recipients of honorary degress and members of the graduating classes in line.

Following the invocation, the convocation address will be delivered by President Marvin. The provost of the university, Dr. William Allen Wilbur, will then introduce the deans and directors, who will present candidates for degrees in course, in the following order: Junior college, Dean Henry Grattan Doyle; Columbian College, Prof. Willard Hayes Yeager; law school, Dean William Cabell Van Vleck; school of engineering, Dean John Raymond Lapham; school of education, Acting Dean William Cullen French; school of government, Prof. Warren Reed West; division of library science, Prof. Elizabeth Lathrop; graduate council, Prof. Charles Edward Hill.

The president of the university will then proceed to the conferring of honorary degrees, reading appropriate citations, presenting diplomas and investing the recipients with the doctoral hood. The exercises will close with the pronouncing of the benediction.

Uncle Sam, as Publisher, Helps Solve Idle Problem

Booklets on Wood Utilization, Now in Best-Seller Class, Serve Economic Purpose and Suggest Work Jobless Can Do.

(Associated Press.)

You won't find them listed in the book pages, but Uncle Sam has some publications that are getting into the best seller ranks.

One is for the home owner, another for the home buyer; one gives a short course in furniture history, construction and selection; while a series of three is for the boy or man handy with hammer and saw.

As best sellers, by the total copies sold or on order, they represent the issue of more than 1,000,000 booklets. They are part of a group of publications of the national committee on wood utilization, a cooperative Federal and private body established in 1925 by direction of President Coolidge and organized by Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce.

The booklets are committee agents for bringing about a wiser and more efficient use of wood and forest products as a means of advancing commercial reforestation.

Written in Popular Tongue.

They differ from many Government publications in that every effort has been made to write them in the language of the persons for whom they are intended. Each represents the thought and experience of recognized experts. Besides being devoid of all technical expressions, some are "spiced up" by pen and ink drawings and all are illustrated.

Most popular has been the furniture booklet, as evidenced by sales and orders for a half million copies. Of increasing importance in times of widespread unemployment is the series for the boy or man handy with tools.

This series of three, called the "You Can Make It" books, is gaining impetus as a means of fostering home industries and of putting to work part of the army of unemployed over the country.

One gives 100 suggestions, with designs and specifications, for articles which vary from large cabinets to a padded knee block for use in scrubbing.

How Jobless Are Aided.

Suggestions in the booklet are said at committee headquarters to have started "You Can Make it For Profit" campaigns in at least four cities.

A special woodworking shop to manufacture book cases, nursery furniture and other suggested articles and sell them for the fund of the mayor's unemployment committee is planned in Memphis, Tenn.

Here in Washington plans have advanced to equip a vacant store, so that unemployed may make and sell things there.

A campaign has been launched in Worcester, Mass., by which unemployed will work on the articles at their homes or former places of employment, products to be displayed in vacant stores. A similar program is projected in Milwaukee, Wis.

DE VALERA SUPPORT SEEN AS FALTERING

Labor Allies May Block His Fight on England if He Is Victorious.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Eamon de Valera's aim to lead Ireland farther away from Great Britain apparently had encountered a stumbling block today among his Labor allies.

Although his Fianna Fail party, with Labor's support, held a lead of six seats in the Dail over the government forces in the Irish Free State's recent election, it was increasingly uncertain how far the Republican leader could go, if eventually victorious, toward greater independence for his country.

With fourteen precincts yet to be heard from, the standing of the parties in the election of members to the new Dail was:

Fianna Fail, 65.
Labor, 7.
Government, 49.
Independents (including Independent Labor), 17.

De Valera thus far has been reticent as to his plans regarding the Anglo-Irish Treaty, the oath of allegiance to King George and the imperial conference called for Ottawa, Canada.

Political observers expressed the belief that his decision regarding the treaty and the oath of allegiance, particularly the abolition of the latter, which he advocated in the campaign, was not likely to be made for some time. The election returns indicated that he would have to depend on Labor support for a working majority in the Dail. The present policy of the Labor party is against any interference with the existing relations between the Free State and England.

Mrs. Mary Reynolds was nominated today to be the government candidate from Sligo in the place of her husband, Paul Reynolds, who was shot and killed last Sunday while on a campaign tour. It was the assassination of him and a detective named McGeehan that caused postponement until next month of the election in the seven divisions of Leitrim-Sligo.

Least Bid System Favored in Tourney

"Four Horsemen," Led by Karn, to Employ Strategy in Bridge Play.

New York, Feb. 22 (A.P.).—The least bidding possible in the preliminary stages is one of the tenets of Willard S. Karn and other members of the "four horsemen" of contract bridge. The "horsemen" are among favorites to win the team of four crown in the Eastern bridge championships, opening tomorrow.

Where other systems require rigidly that partner of a bidder give his full raise possible at once in the suit offered, the "horsemen" raise partner to one less than the responding hand seems to justify. They avoid jump forcing takeouts in other suits when possible. They deny normal support freely with no trump bids on much less strength than other systems. When partners both have strong hands they elect the best make at once, if they can, and defer mention of other suits.

Karn believes that in many instances in contract declarer's bidding gives the defending side too much information which it subsequently uses to the declarer's disadvantage.

Flood Horror Told By Mrs. Lindbergh

Description of China Flight Sent Over National Radio Hook-Up.

New York, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—In a smooth, low-pitched voice Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh told the Nation today of the horrors of the Chinese flood which she and her famous husband observed last year on their flight to the Orient.

While the colonel sat near by, Mrs. Lindbergh, appearing demure and even smaller than usual beside a tall radio microphone, spoke for fifteen minutes.

She wore a two-piece black wool dress, with a touch of white woolen trimming at throat and wrists, and a wide, red patent leather belt. She had a black felt hat and low-heeled shoes.

"I do not know how those people felt," said Mrs. Lindbergh, "when they saw a last hope disappear into the sky, or what those other millions felt who saw us fly over their desolate country.

"I know, though, that I had a kind of horror, that I should be so near them and have the power of escaping so easily from their misery."

PETERSBURG MAN IS ARRESTED IN KILLING OF BARNEY M'BRIDE

New Jersey, to be sold, and track of it has been lost. He hopes to recover it shortly, he added.

Detectives J. T. Avery and F. C. Beasley had no difficulty in finding Jackson when told he was wanted in Maryland. The prisoner is a native of Petersburg section of the State, but has divided his time between Petersburg, Richmond and Washington during the last fifteen years. He is known by the nickname of "Slim," according to police.

The first clew to the identity of the murderer came to light about two months ago, when the case was reopened. At this time Mrs. Lily W. Pumphrey, her husband, William, and Leo Hazel told Garrison and Sheriff W. C. Hopkins that Temple Biggs had often told them of the murder of McBride.

Biggs was arrested on charge of being an accessory to the crime, but denies knowing anything of it. He has been held for action of the Prince Georges grand jury. According to the stories told by the Pumphreys, Biggs was present when McBride was killed. Biggs, they said, told them he was a driver of the truck which hauled McBride's body away from the house.

According to the three, Biggs had said that a man named Jackson stabbed the victim, whose head was later crushed in. Jackson and another man divided about $20,000 which McBride had won, they quoted Biggs as saying. Biggs himself, according to the story told by them, received $1,500 for his share in the crime and for his truck, which was burned because of the blood in it.

It is understood that agents of the Department of Justice hunted for Jackson shortly after the crime, but were unable to locate him. On one occasion they are said to have gone to the house where he was living, in Montgomery County, but he fled to Virginia.

When Biggs was arrested a man living in Prince Georges County came to Garrison and told where Jackson had gone when the left the State. Garrison followed the trail, cold nearly ten years, and tracked the fugitive as far as Richmond. Here the track of the man was lost for several days, but it was finally learned that he was in Petersburg, 23 miles south of the Virginia capital. His arrest followed. The name of the man who gave the first clue to Jackson's whereabouts is being withheld to protect him from possible violence at the hands of the prisoner's friends, Garrison said.

Naval Flier's Death In Cuba Crash Revealed

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Death of Ensign Philip E. Parks, naval reserves, in an airplane accident in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, February 4, was revealed for the first time here today when his body was sent to Haverhill, Mass., for burial.

Parks was a son of James Edward Parks, of Waterville, Me. He was killed when the plane he was piloting collided with a motor launch in the bay, according to information received here. Parks was 24. His body arrived here Friday aboard the supply ship Nitro.

LAST-MINUTE CREDIT BILL DISPUTE LOOMS

This, he explained, was intended for large banks in commercial and industrial centers.

Under the second provision, individual banks with capitalization not exceeding $2,000,000 can receive the credit benefits, Senator Glass noted.

"The second provision is avowedly for small banks so detached from commercial centers that they would be at a disadvantage in receiving accommodations by not being able to join a group as provided under the first provision," he said.

"The administration is trying to get for the big banks the provision avowedly intended at the White House conference for the small banks."

Saturday authoritative sources reported the administration behind a movement to eliminate the restrictions placed on large banks by the Senate wording. It became apparent that President Hoover and his advisers were anxious that this limitation be removed on the ground only banks with capitalization below $2,000,000 would benefit.

"All banks both large and small will be benefited, regardless of capitalization," Senator Glass said.

Senator Glass plans to call the Senate and House conferees to compose the differences between their bills tomorrow, with a view to submitting a report to Congress for final action before the end of the week.

Meanwhile, the House ways and means committee will hear tomorrow Secretary Mills on the Treasury's draft of a proposed selected manufacturers' sales tax and the Democrats will seek to set up a special economy committee to report on reorganizing the Government by April 15.

Over in the Senate the Norris bill to curb injunctions by Federal courts in labor disputes will be considered tomorrow. Sharp controversy is in prospect, in view of a substitute proposal pending.

A move to extract the world court proposition from the foreign relations committee is expected to begin.

President and Mrs. Hoover Attend Services At Christ Church in Alexandria; First Lady Is Guest of Teachers

PRESIDENT AND MRS. HOOVER attended the services at Christ Church in Alexandria yesterday morning. They were accompanied by the naval aid, Capt. Russell Train, and Lieut. Col. James Ulio, one of the military aids.

This morning at 7:15 o'clock, Mrs. Hoover attended the breakfast given at the Washington Hotel by the California Teachers Association.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, will entertain at dinner on Thursday evening at the embassy.

The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, will return today from New York, where he passed the week-end. Lady Lindsay, who has been in Boca Grande, Fla., for some weeks, will return to Washington about March 10.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter will return to Washington tomorrow from Boston, where they have been spending the week-end with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Georges Peter.

Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, alumnus, of De Pauw University at Greencastle, Ind., and John A. Miller, of Swarthmore, Pa., alumnus of Indiana University, and author of several textbooks on mathematics, will address a gathering of 250 Indiana Unviersity alumni Wednesday at the University Club.

Representative Fred Purnell will act as toastmaster, and Representative Arthur H. Greenwood will also speak. Mrs. Purnell will assist in the musical portion of the program.

John J. Reinhard, who can be reached at National 5785, is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. M. M. Neeley, of Fairmont, W. Va., has joined Senator Neeley in Washington for a few days and is at the Willard.

Masque Party Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Sol Bloom.

Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom entertained in the commissioner's box last evening at the masque "Wakefield" at the Constitution Hall when they had as their guests Senator Simeon Fess, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Millard Tydings, Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass, Representative and Mrs. Joseph Byrns, Representative and Mrs. John Q. Tilson, Mr. C. Bascom Slemp, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook and Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart.

Miss Vera Bloom also entertained a box party, having as her guests the members of the supper party which the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Skalicky gave for Mr. Royal Gopeland, jr., and his fiancee, Miss Virginia Duryee. Among the guests in Miss Bloom's box were the Attache of the Swiss Legation, M. Pierre de Salis; the Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemececk, and Miss Mary Louise Johnson.

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Nobile Luigi Notarbartolo del Duchi di Villarosa, entertained at luncheon Saturday at the Mayflower in compliment to members of the staff of his embassy.

The company included Count Alberto Marchetti di Muraglio, Lieut. Col. Marco Pennaroli, the Air Attache and Signora Sbernadori; the First Secretaary and Countess Boncalli di Montorio, Nobile Carlo Andrea Sodardi, the Assistant Naval A tache and Nobile Orietta Figrolo del Conti Gropello, and the Counselor for Emigration and Signora Simone Bonardelli Desjardine.

Also Count and Countess Fumasoni Biondi and Mr. E. Donegani, of New York City, the latter a brother-in-law of the host.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Dawes, of Evanston, Ill., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gates Dawes at the Willard.

Mr. Dwight F. Davis, jr., son of the former Governor General of the Philippines and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, who went to Paris for the Christmas holidays, has returned to this country and has gone to Philadelphia where he is with Cassatt & Co., bankers.

Mrs. Sypret W. Hendrick, who has been living in Paris for the past year, is now in Cannes, and after a brief stay in Paris will return to this country in the early spring.

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been invited by the president of the New York State Society to be guest of honor at its reception to be held March 31 in the grand ballroom of the Willard and has informed President Davis that he would be delighted to attend this affair should his very pressing legislative schedule allow.

Since the termination of his duties as Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the Woodrow Wilson Administration Gov. Roosevelt has appeared very rarely in Washington and a great deal of interest is being displayed in his prospective visit.

The Colgate Musical Club of Colgate University will be present at this meeting of the society and will assist in the entertainment. The President of Colgate University, Mr. George B. Cutten, will also be a guest of honor at the reception.

Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Representative John Clark and Representative and Mrs. John Taber, prominent in all the activities of the society, plan to attend this affair as well as do a large number of New Yorkers residing in Washington, as this is one of the very few invitations the governor is considering during this very busy period.

Among those who are assisting President Davis in the plans for this important event are Mr. F. W. Krichelt, Mrs. William A. Carr, Mrs. C. P. Hammerly, vice presidents of the society; Representative John Taber, Mr. William R. Vallance, legal adviser of the State Department; Dr. LeMarr Harris, Mr. Grant R. Dennison, Mr. James E. Black, Mr. William A. Carr, financial secretary of the society; Mr. G. Kibby Munson, Treasurer; Mrs. Louise Evanson, secretary, and many other prominent New Yorkers.

Reception to Honor G. W. U. Honorary Degree Recipients.

The president of the George Washington University, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, will entertain at a reception this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the president's room in honor of the group of alumni who are to be recipients of honorary degrees at the George Washington bicentennial convocation tonight.

In the group are the Secretary of War, Mr. Hurley; Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware; the Ambassador to Peru, Mr. Fred Morris Dearing; the Minister to China, Mr. Nelson Trusler Johnson; the chairman of the Board of Commissioners of the District, Dr. Luther Halsey Reichelderfer; Dr. Ray Smith Bassler, of the United States National Museum; Mr. Union Noble Bethell, of Montclair, N. J.; Mr. Philander Betts, 3d., of Newark; Mr. Walter Collins Clephane, Mr. George Bruce Cortelyou, of New York, former Secretary of the Treasury; Dr. John Howard Dellinger, Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Mr. Adolph August Hoehling, formerly justice of the District Supreme Court; Mr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, Mr. Alvan Macauley, of Detroit; Mr. David Albert Molitor, of Detroit; Prof. Charles Napoleon Moore, of the University of Cincinnati; Prof. Joseph Fels Ritt, of Columbia; Dr. Sterling Ruffin, Dr. Will Carson Ryan, jr., formerly of Swarthmore College; Dr. Daniel Kerfoot Shute, President Albert Norman Ward, of Western Maryland College, and Dr. Alexander Wetmore, of the Smithsonian Institution.

Many members of the official group of Washington will attend the convocation ceremonies tonight in Constitution Hall, preceding the Bicentennial ball.

Mrs. James Carroll Frazer entertained at a box party last night at the Wakefield Masque. Her guests included Mrs. William B. Van Rensselaer, Mrs. David L. Goodrich, of Albany, N. Y.; Miss Annie May Heheman and Miss Josephine Paton.

The meeting of the Red Cross unit of the Congressional Club, which was scheduled for today, has been postponed until next Monday at 10 a. m., it was announced yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Carmody entertained at the dinner dance at the Shoreham Saturday night in honor of Mrs. Carmody's sister, Miss Ludelle Hinahan, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. Their other guests were Miss Helen Price, Mr. F. George Clendaniel and Mr. J. Warren Price.

Former Representative and Mrs. John H. Smitherick have as their guest Miss Roslyn Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga. Miss Vereen has been attending the dances at Princeton.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Burke and their young son, Walter F. Burke, jr., of Larchmont, N. Y., are guests at the Shoreham over Washington's birthday. Mr. Burke was a former resident of Washington, having lived here for twelve years before going to Larchmont.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry T. Moore, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., are guests at the Dodge for several days. Dr. Moore is president of Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs and is in the Capital attending the meetings of the National Education Association.

Miss Clara Bush entertained at the dinner dance at the Shoreham Saturday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Landgren, of Pittsburgh. Her other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Otterman, Miss Eva Bird, Miss Margaret Tew, Mr. Hoffman, Mr. Llewellyn Luce and Mr. Dorsey Waters.

This afternoon, from 4 to 7 o'clock, Maj. and Mrs. Samuel H. Walker will be at home informally to their friends at 420 B street northeast, in celebration of their sixtieth wedding anniversary. They will be assisted in receiving their guests by their sons and daughters, and by the Rev. A. F. Poore, pastor of Waugh M. E. Church, and Mrs. Poore, and also by Mrs. Walker's two sisters, Miss Alice Brady, of New York City, and Mrs. John Bailey, of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, who have arrived in Washington for the occasion.

Mrs. William B. Hardy, Miss Rosalie Walker, Mrs. H. J. Walther, Mrs. McClain Smith, Mrs. Maxwell Winter, Mr. Robert H. Walker and Mr. Arthur B. Walker are the daughters and sons of the couple, all of whom will be present this afternoon, as well as the grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Nancy Lee Shantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Shantz, of this city.

Mrs. Stone Entertains With Talk on Roumania.

Mrs. Mary Hanchett Stone, of Saginaw, Mich., entertained at the Carlton Hotel on Saturday afternoon, giving a talk on Roumanian handcraft exhibits, by which the great Queen Elizabeth helped to resuscitate her people after the war of liberation in 1777-78.

Mrs. Stone was a friend of the former queen, known as Carmen Sylva, and read some of the poems of this renowned writer to her guests.

Among the guests invited for the occasion were: Mrs. Doak, wife of the Secretary of Labor; Mrs. Couzens, wife of Senator Couzens, of Michigan; Mrs. James Byrnes, of South Carolina; Mrs. Allard Gastue and daughter, Mrs. Boyd Carpenter, Mrs. Erwin, of Arbremont; Mrs. Lars Anderson, Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. John Bennett, Mrs. Russell Bennett, Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. O. E. Baker, Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, Mrs. Greer, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Edna M. Colman.

The senior class of Arlington Hall entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham Saturday. The guests were Miss Evalyn Whiteside, Miss Dorothy Hackney, Miss Nancy Nalle, Miss Mary Harris, Miss Billy Gliet, Miss Zella Schonwald, Miss Lay Crute, Miss Audrey Cornell, Miss Betty Katlan, Miss Helen Brister, Miss Elizabeth Shipley, Miss Hattie Kurth, Miss Chase Lyerly. Mrs. Odenhall was chaperone of the party.

The home of Mrs. Harry S. Benton on Saturday was the scene of a very delightful reception and tea in honor of Miss Anne Lomas, alumnae secretary of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass. Among those present were the following graduates of Wheaton: Miss Constance Connor Brown, Mrs. John Parsons, Mrs. James Edward Dalgleish, Mrs. George Smith Newcombe, Miss Josephine Lee, Miss Dorothy Chatham and Mrs. Henry Parker.

The alumnae arranged for a booth on College day, March 5, at the American Association of University Women.

Official and musical Washington are taking a keen interest in the forthcoming Lenten concert by the popular A Capella Choir of First Congregational Church, directed by Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, which will this season take place Friday evening, March 11, at 8:45 o'clock, in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

In the senatorial group, the patronesses are Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Daniel Hastings, Mrs. Felix Hebert, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Mrs. Peter Norbeck, Mrs. Arthur Vandenburg, Mrs. James Watson, Mrs. Thomas Sterling; and in the congressional group the patronesses are Mrs. A. M. Free, Mrs. Homer Hoch, Mrs. John Ketchum, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Mrs. James S. Parker, Mrs. Tillman Parks, Mrs. Henry W. Watson and Mrs. W. W. Chalmers.

A large number of boxes have already been reserved by outstanding hostesses of the Capital City for this event, which is the second annual public Lenten concert by the A Capella Choir of Washington.

Miss Constance L. Peterkin, of Parkersburg, W. Va., is the guest of Mrs. M. du Pont Lee at the Powhatan.

Mount Holyoke Alumnae Honor School Officials.

Miss Florence Purington, dean emeritus, and Miss Harriett M. Allyn, dean of Mount Holyoke College, were the guests of honor at a luncheon given on Friday at the Old England Coffee House by the Mount Holyoke College Alumnae Club of Washington. Other out-of-town guests were Miss Emily H. Dutton, dean of Sweet Briar College, Miss Mary Louise Allen, recently of the finance department of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., Miss Flora S. Curtis, dean of Senior High School, Pawtucket, Rhode Island, Mrs. Alice Bidwell Wesenberg, head of the English department of Butler College, and Miss Justina M. Eich, dean of women of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio. Dean Allyn in bringing news of the college, told of the increasing interest of Mount Holyoke College students in international affairs, especially since Miss Woolley, the president has been sent as a delegate to the disarmament conference. The arrangements for this delightful luncheon were made by Miss Helen Demond. There were about 45 alumnae present.

The Shoreham Supper Club was very gay Saturday night, having among its guests, Miss Laura Barkley, Maj. F. McKenzie Davison, with a party of 10, Mr. Tomadelli, Mr. Doboloff, Miss Rose Page, Lieut. Paul Caraway, Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster with a party of six, Mr. Nat Thompson with a party of four, Mrs. Katherine Fenton with a party of four, Col. Young, Mr. Edward Rothrock and many others. The supper club room is most attractive, the walls being hung with green velour, the ceiling of dark blue with silver stars and the lighting effect most unusual, the lights being in the shape of stars. This is getting to be one of the most popular rendzvous for the younger social set of Washington.

Tonight in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel to the tune of patriotic airs, the blast of the trumpet, waving flags and streamers, the New England States Society with the thirteen original States societies will meet to pay honor to the memory of the Father of His Country, George Washington. On this the 200th anniversary nothing could be more fitting than a fete of this kind in the city, which bears his name.

Diplomats, members of Congress, civil and military life will gather here to pay homage. It will be a gala affair worthy of this great day and nothing has been left undone to make the affair an outstanding one.

Some of the patrons and patronesses include Senator and Mrs. Arthur Capper, of Kansas, Senator and Miss Helen Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Representative and Mrs. Samuel Kendall, Representative and Mrs. Edward Goss, Representative and Mrs. Richard Freeman, Representative and Mrs. Morgan Sanders, Representative and Mrs. John J. McSwain, Mrs. Kathleen Turner, Mr. and Mrs. George Holman, Mr. and Mrs. W. Stuart Hodge, Mrs. Randolph Hopkins, Miss Frances Rainey, Miss Rose Dugan, Miss Josephine Black and many others.

The guest speakers of the affair will be Representative and Mrs. William Rogers and Mrs. Donald D. Caldwell, vice president general of the District of Columbia D. A. R.

A feature of the evening will be a flower pageant representing the various States. In this pageant will appear Miss Lillian Fleming, Miss Ruby Hutchinson, Miss Frances Rainey, Miss Margaret Cuddy, Miss Anne O'Connell and Mr. Adolf Tovorovsky will play the accompanying music, while Miss Aubyne Umholtz will sing the official Bicentennial song.

The All-States Officers Society Bicentennial fete held tonight in the Shoreham Hotel is expected to be one of the most brilliant balls ever held in the District of Columbia. Mr Hoffheims, president of the society, has had the cooperation of the presidents of the State societies, who have carefully selected hostesses of great prominence and ancestry for the occasion.

A complete list of the hostesses, to represent each State, is announced by the executive committee: Mrs. Brookhart, wife of Senator Brookhart, will represent Iowa; Mrs. Shipstead, wife of Senator Shipstead, Minnesota; Mrs. L. C. Dyer, wife of Representative Dyer and president of the Congressional Club, Missouri; Mrs. H. J. Drane, wife of Representative Drane, Florida; Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, wife of Representative Ramspeck, Georgia; Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, wife of Mr. Yost, of the Federal Radio Commission, West Virginia; Mrs. Richard A. Allen, Virginia; Mrs. M. E. Woodward, Connecticut; Miss Mary V. Merrick, Maryland; Miss Pearl Mount, Alabama; Mrs. Robert P. Smith, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Paul Wooton, Louisiana; Miss Grace McGerr, Mississippi; Mrs. Elizabeth Chenowith, Nebraska; Mrs. Dennis Chazez, New Mexico; Mrs. Roy C. Potts, Oklahoma; Mrs. Frank Mondell, Wyoming. They will be assisted in welcoming the guests by pages and also by the wives of the presidents of the State societies.

The feature of the ball—a tableau presenting "Living Pictures" from the diary of the life of George Washington, is to begin promptly at 9 o'clock in the main lounge of the Shoreham. The society announces that it can accommodate all guests who wish to attend, as arrangements have been made to use the main ballroom in addition to the gold room to insure ample dancing space. The dance is to be formal, or guests may wear colonial costumes in keeping with the spirit of the affair.

Red Cross Group Reports on Work

5,624 Hours of Service Donated by Members in January.

Volunteer workers of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross gave 5,624 hours of service in the various fields of work of the organization during January, according to the monthly report issued yesterday. The financial statement shows a substantial increase in balance during the month. The balance of January 1 was $35,449.56, and the balance of January 31 totals $75,202.93.

The annual meeting of the organization was held January 18 and a special meeting of the executive committee January 28. Officers and members were elected for the year and there were two important committees organized, the report shows.

Among the statements of the report are: 225 articles from production were donated to the national for distribution to needy civilians; a cooking class for women from the Neighborhood House was started, with meetings twice a week; a series of six nutrition lectures was started, and a class of five was graduated in home hygiene with a presentation ceremony.

Albion College Alumni To Hold Annual Dinner

Members of the Albion College Alumni Club will hold their annual dinner tomorrow night at the Cairo Hotel at 6:30 o'clock, and persons interested in the school attending the National Education Association sessions here are invited to attend.

The dinner will be informal, with no set program. Similar reunions will be held in about 20 other principal cities at the same hour.

Musical Benefit Slated March 4

Rodeheaver and Quartet Will Be Featured on Willard Program.

Musical benefit, featuring Homer Rodeheaver and his quartet of colored spiritual singers, will be held the evening of March 4 at the Willard Hotel under auspices of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission and the Chilren's Emergency Home.

The program is called "An Evenin' in the Southland" and, besides the spirituals which Rodeheaver and the quartet will sing, there will be numbers by Ruth Rodeheaver Thomas, soprano, accompanied by Mary Atkinson Henson. Both Rodeheaver and his sister were reared in the Tennessee mountains and long before spirituals became popular on the concert stage, he introduced them at the famous "Billy" Sunday programs over which he presided. Rodeheaver recruited the quartet from various sections of the South.

Tall Cedars to Hold Banquet.

Washington's Courage Is Today's Inspiration

Inadequate supplies, untrained and badly equipped troops won a seven years' war! Washington's sense of timeliness and his theory that the best defense is an attack, brought success from a difficult situation. Now, during the two hundredth anniversary of his birth, a similar situation demands the same strategy. The best defense is an attack on the root of the evil—lack of confidence.

Public confidence in this bank springs from able management evidenced by forty-two years of constant application of sound banking methods and principles.

THE ears of the Nation will be tuned in on Washington, Mount Vernon and Alexandria for the George Washington Bicentennial birthday programs today. There will be special events for the listener not only from the Nation's Capital but from everywhere from early morning until late into the night. George Washington's name will resound through the ether, and perhaps around the globe by radio, as it never has before.

EVIDENTLY Columbia thinks there are some peope who would like to hear music of that character, for they would not be putting Howard Barlow on at 11 o'clock at night, as they plan to do, beginning next Monday. Barlow is the best man in his line Columbia has, but like Ludwig Lurier and the slumber music at the NBC, they haven't been giving him a fair chance.

Barlow and Laurier, tremendously popular with their audiences, are almost crowded out of the picture by the orchestras, crooners and torch singers offered on commercial time. NBC even tried to throw Laurier off the air altogether but there was such a comeback he was restored. Evidently there has been about as little appreciation of Barlow by Columbia.

This writer heartily approves putting Barlow on at the late period but why do they have to put him on at exactly the same time as Laurier? Is Columbia trying "to keep up with Lizzie" by offering the same type of program that the NBC is featuring that time or is it trying to please the listeners?

If the latter, why not put Barlow on either before or after Laurier, so that both may be enjoyed. They appeal to exactly the same type of audience, and, if heard at the same time, these listeners, much to their sorrow, will have to miss one or the other, because most certainly they won't tune in on both at the same time.

WASHINGTON, D. C., will receive the Parade of the States salute at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

"Washington's Renunciation," a story that tells how George Washington might have become a king, will be dramatized during the Soconyland sketch over the WEAF network, but not WRC, at 8 p. m.

Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine, will urge the strengthening of the United States Army and Navy over the National Radio Forum over WRC at 10 tonight.

Fred East and Bill Raymond, well-known Washington duo, will be heard in a fifteen minute program, accompanied by Bob Gotta, from the studios of Station WRC at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon.

REPRESENTATIVE AMLIE, of Wisconsin, has introduced a bill which aims "to prohibit commercial advertising by means of radio on Sunday." Mr. Amlie, in commenting on the purpose of his bill, said: "Why should not business respect the Sabbath on the air as well as in other days?"

"The purpose of this proposed Federal legislation is therefore to compel radio stations to 'respect the Sabbath.' It is for the purpose of protecting a religious day from being desecrated, which, of course, makes it religious legislation. But Congress is prohibited by the Constitution from enacting religious laws," C. S. Longacre declared in a fight the Seventh Day Adventists launched on the bill yesterday.

"If Congress can prohibit commercial advertising by means of radio on Sunday, it can with equal propriety prohibit commercial advertising by means of the newspapers on Sunday; or by means of the billboards; or by means of display windows; or by means of films; in fact, by any means whatsoever.

"To single out radio stations, and radio stations only, to the exclusion of all other means of commercial advertising on Sunday, brands the proposed legislation as class legislation, and therefore unconstitutional. Nobody's rights are invaded; nobody's health is impaired; and nobody's safety is endangered by commercial advertising over the radio on Sunday. If a person does not want to listen to it, he has his own remedy in his receiving set. All he needs to do is to turn it off or shift the dial to another station till he finds what is agreeable to his taste. But some people seem to be very helpless. They simply can not adjust themselves to the world's environment and they want the Federal Government to help them be religious when they have not enough backbone to shut off their own radio set to undesirable matter coming over the radio.

"Personally, I do not enjoy jazz music coming over my radio set, but I would be the last person in the world to ask the Federal Government to pass a law prohibiting jazz music over the radio. Some people seem to think that if there is anything in the world that they don't fancy, or is contrary to their religious predilection, Congress ought to pass a law prohibiting it at once. Some folks still entertain the old notion that Congress can legislate upon every subject under heaven, both civil and religious."

MICROPHONES will be set up in a room at the top of the Empire State Building tonight to catch the conversation of Roy Chapman Andrews, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Lawrence Gould and Kermit Roosevelt, who will be among the famous explorers gathered there to honor Bertram Thomas, conqueror of the Rub al Khali, Arabia's "land of emptiness," at the Desert Explorers' banquet (WRC, 11:30 p. m.).

Members of the Vassar College Glee Club and choir will be heard in the fourth of a series of concerts by the glee clubs and choirs of America's leading women's colleges, to be broadcast this afternoon (WMAL, 3:45 o'clock).

Two of the leading singers of the newly organized Washington Civic Opera Company will present highlights from the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Gondoliers," on WMAL at 6:15 p. m. on Wednesday.

They are Beverly O'Brien, soprano, and one of the D. C. finalists in last year's Atwater Kent auditions, and Henry C. Nestor, singing traffic policeman of Washington.

The Lucky Strike Dance Hour will make an attempt to pick up an orchestra from the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo, Japan, tomorrow night (WRC, 10 o'clock).

ADD to Wilstach's similes:

"As busy as Sol Bloom on George Washington's birthday."

Photograph Exhibition Scheduled at Museum

The Telephone Camera Club of Washington has arranged an exhibit of its collection of photographs included in the exhibition in New York and Chicago in 1931, in the Photographic Salon of the National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution, during the month of March.

The Telephone Camera Club is a recently organized national association of Bell System Camera Clubs, which are composed entirely of amateur photographers within the individual units of the Bell system. Included in its membership are the Telephone Camera Club of Manhattan, the ERPI Camera Club, the Bronx Westchester Camera Club, the Blue Bell Camera Club and the Wekearnyan Camera Club.

Jane Interprets the Mode

Agnes hat, chic for spring, consists of a peaked crown and flowers in the back. Or a crocheted white straw and a blue kasha bow matching the scarf.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—I'm telling you, there simply is no whicher than a Hollywood premiere! Oh, yes, all sorts of things open and have first nights and whatnots, but dem Kleig lights! Dose celebrities! Dat meggyphone and Mike-graphophone! 'Tis enough to make even the most sophisticated fashun cricket in the woild (which I ain't) shiver clear down to the toes of her Perugia sandles. (Yes, the 2,000-franc ones that are sold around the corner now for two bits, or something like that).

And Greta! Oh, I give up!

Well, just so nobody will be too jealous, there was Constance Bennett hiding whatever new frock she was surely wearing 'neath a sable coat; 'n' Mary and Doug—Mary, as usual, in ermine, Doug in tails; and Norma Shearer in cream satin, with guess? False pieces exactly matching her lovely wild bob, and looking for all the world as though she had long long, reddish golden hair!

Well, and so many other celebrities that one couldn't quite place right off, that even your Dah-ray came in for the battery of opera glasses!

And what did every one wear? And what did or did not distinguish the gatherings? And were there jewels or not? And, oh, lots of other questions.

• • • •

FIRST, black and white isn't even funny any more, when it comes to distinction. Because at least three quarters of the audience went in for it, and are doing so at every chic gathering. 'Tis a positive relief to see a bitter green or reddish purple, the few times one does. That's a tip for the woman who wishes to be distinctive and, quite within the bounds of good taste, stand out from the crowd. Don't wear black or white!

And the vogue for a lavish display of questionable costume jewelry is over. Beautiful jewelry, but obviously real, and not too much, was the outstanding jewelry story. Long gloves occasionally, but not always. And a noticeable long-hair effect, whether it was the way the bob was dressed or actually long hair.

And that, my dahr-lings, was a Hollywood premiere!

• • • •

EXTRUH! Extruh! Agnes (pronounced "Ah-nez") high hats the world!

Well, not so verryyy high, at that; only in a little, teeny tiny point at the crown! There it's sketched for you—the new Agnes idea for spring, in a fine white straw hat, with a climbing cluster of flowers placed at the very back. And the peak!

Sometimes she puts her flowers or pompoms right on this peak, too. Or, if you prefer, the other hat sketched was of fine white "albene" straw in one of her popular crochet versions—and trimmed with a bow of blue kasha to match the scarf worn with it.

• • • •

Coin De Couleur.

Beige is leading the color field honors again—both for sports and general daytime wear. And sometimes the off-white shades that are so popular for evening find themselves very close to, if not actually in, the beige class.

Au revoir.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PLANTING PERENNIALS.

TREES, shrubs and herbaceous plants will soon be bursting forth and in only a few weeks our gardens will again be a mass of bloom. A great deal of the future success of any garden depends on perennials. These are the plants that lend an air of permanency; without them our borders would be bare until June.

Perennials are reproduced in several different ways, the iris, for example, is grown from rhizomes and bulbs, while other varieties are grown from seeds, cuttings, division and bulbs. As a class these plants are adaptable to almost any soil and location, though we give more than a passing thought to the requirements of the individual varieties when planning a border.

Regarding location: Try, when possible, to have your border run north and south as this will assure the plants of the full benefit of the sun all day long.

The preparation of a border is very important, for the plants will likely remain in the same position for several years and plant food should be available to them at all times. The ground should be spaded to a depth of 12 or 15 inches, the deeper the better; then a generous quantity of well-rotted manure added. This you must spread over the surface and later thoroughly incorporate with the soil. In certain localities where it is impossible to get well-decayed manure you will have to use a well-balanced plant food mixed with humus and bonemeal. Never be induced to use fresh stable manure as it is almost sure to cause fungus trouble.

If you are not familiar with perennials and are starting a new border, using plants which you do not really know, do study the descriptions on the seed packages or in the catalogues and ask questions. Learn the height of each plant and arrange them accordingly with the tall growers in the back of the border, unless you are using them as accent plants, when you may plant a tall grower at almost any point. Try to avoid a spotted effect by setting several plants of one variety in a clump or group.

A good rule to follow when planting perennials is to place them a little closer than half their own height. For example, plants growing 2 feet high should be placed 1 foot apart. This is a rather old rule, but a reliable one, especially for the amateur to follow.

THE HOMEMAKER

By NANCY CAREY

PLAN A SUBSTANTIAL MEAL TUESDAY.

WELL, is the ice cream ordered, and were you sure to get little red hatchets filled with candied cherries to grace each guest's place at the table? But I dare say the cake is nicely iced with red, white and blue frosting; plans for the evening all made, and mother is taking her last-minute rest before the bell rings and the first of the guests arrive. I hope all of you who are commemorating the birth of the father of our country by way of patriotic festivities will have a pleasant time and, indeed, such a one that will long be remembered in the annals of our pleasure-loving friends.

TUESDAY'S DINNER.

Pork Pie
Dutch Cabbage
Diced Buttered Carrots
Dressed Watercress
Apple Snow
Coffee

Pork Pie.

2 cupfuls cold roast pork.
1 or 2 onions—as desired.
2 cupfuls pork gravy.

Cut pork into 1-inch pieces. Slice and boil onions in salted water until tender. Strain and add to the pork. Place in a deep baking dish, cover with heated gravy. Cover with biscuit dough and bake in a hot oven until brown.

Biscuit Dough.

1 cupful flour.
2 teaspoonfuls baking powder.
½ teaspoonful salt.
4 tablespoonfuls melted fat.
½ cupful liquid, milk or milk and water.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add melted fat to liquid and pour into the flour mixture all at one time, then cut it in with a knife. Roll to three-fourth-inch thickness on a floured board to size of baking dish. Slit the trust both in the center and around the edge to allow the steam to escape. If there is no gravy left from the roast, it may be made by trying out the fat from the pork and mixing with flour and water, as follows:

1-3 cupful melted pork fat.
¼ cupful flour.
½ teaspoonful salt.
2 cupfuls water.
Dash of pepper.

Mix flour and salt with melted fat. Add water and cook until it thickens, stirring constantly.

Dutch Cabbage.

1 small head cabbage.
1 egg—slightly beaten.
1 tablespoonful butter.
4 tablespoonfuls cream.
1 teaspoonful salt.
4 tablespoonfuls vinegar.
Dash of pepper.

Shred cabbage and cook quickly in a small quantity of boiling, salted water. When tender, remove from fire—and add butter, salt, pepper, cream and egg. Cook until egg thickens, remove from fire and add the vinegar very slowly. Serve hot.

Apple Snow.

1 cupful unsweetened apple pulp.
Lemon juice—to taste.
3 egg whites—stiffly beaten.
Sugar.

Pare, quarter and steam enough apples to make one cupful of pulp. Press through a sieve. Add sugar and lemon juice to taste and gradually fold in the egg whites. Serve chilled with custard sauce or cream.

Soft Custard Sauce.

1 pint milk—scalded
¼ cupful sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix together the sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add the milk gradually, stirring all the time. Stir until thick and smooth. Place in a double boiler, cover and cook 20 minutes. Add to the slightly beaten egg yolks, return to the double boiler and cook one or two minutes. Strain, add the vanilla and chill.

THE WEIGHT GUIDE.

FOR individual assistance, write to Nancy Carey, sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and give age, weight, height and habits of life.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey—I am 14 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall and weigh 120 pounds. Do I weigh too much? I am very fond of athletics and take gym work at night besides at my school. Is there any way I can prevent my leg muscles becoming too large and prominent?

MARIAN.

You should weigh about 110 pounds, Marian, but since at your age it is better to be slightly over rather than under weight, do not worry too much about reducing. Especially, since you are busy at school and very active in sports, is it more than necessary that your diet lack none of the elements essential for health and happiness. Happiness, you know, does depend to a great extent on health, Marian. Wealth, clothes, social position and all that it insures are not worth much if good health is lacking, but if we are strong and well burdens of all kinds become just that much lighter, just that much easier to bear.

As for your diet, breakfast each day should include fruit or fruit juice (fresh, if possible), cereal, toast, butter and milk; luncheon, vegetable soup or a vegetable platter with bread and butter and a baked apple or fruit gelatine for dessert; dinner, meat, potatoes or any other vegetable, another cooked vegetable, preferably green; fruit salad or other raw crisp vegetable; bread, butter, and, for dessert, a light pudding of some kind. There must be a glass of milk at each meal, too, Marian. Don't forget that. It is so very, very important.

Concerning the exercise, one of its special advantages is that it fully develops lithe, supple muscles which are, in their turn, conducive to a well-shaped, perfectly proportioned body. So do not worry if these same muscles should seem a little large now. As you grow older they will be more in proportion to your size, and, since we usually have less and less time for exercise as time goes by, take advantage of your every opportunity now. Your chance for a healthy, happy future will be just that much more increased.

Nancy Carey

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THE GROWTH OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

PHYSICIANS have never been satisfied with the nutrition work done in school, in which the pupils were weighed and measured, and those found below a certain standard labeled "underweight" and treated in accordance with rules for underweights. Their criticism was that such standards took no account of racial differences, and variation in size of bones and in bodily conformations. Under the scheme some children were stigmatized who should not have been, and some spoiled their digestion, as well as their outlook on life, trying to make a grade that to them was unnatural.

This movement gave way to one based on the theory that if a child is normal and in good health, he will grow in height and weight at about a certain rate, and with reasonable consistency. This plan was an improvement over the first, but it, too, had some shortcomings. Both plans were of service in several ways, one of which was that physicians began to study the height, weight and build of children far more closely than they had previously done.

Now Drs. W. P. Lucas and H. B. Pryor propose a method of measurement which they term the "width-length index." They carefully measure the width of the hips and the length; from the top of the head to the soles. The first gives the width; the second the length. The index is obtained by dividing the width by the length. This method does not take into consideration race, growth peculiarities and some other angles, but it has virtues. It does throw light on body type, a subject that is being studied by Drs. Stockard, Bakwin and Draper, and that seems to promise much.

Drs. Lucas and Pryor find proof that Stockard, Draper and others are right in dividing people into two great types—the linear and the lateral.

Those of the linear type are long and narrow; those of the lateral, broad and disposed to be short. Those of the first type are prone to the following disorders: Tuberculosis of the bowels, enlarged glands of the neck, enlarged tonsils and adenoids, influenza and colds, tuberculosis, melancholia, nervousness, fevers, appendicitis, intestinal troubles, gastric ulcer, anemia, rheumatism, diphtheria and scarlet fever. They are apt to escape those disorders to which the broad-short people are especially susceptible.

The disorders to which the second group are susceptible are: Heart disease, chronic nephritis, arteriosclerosis, aneurysm, apoplexy, paralysis, diabetes, bladder trouble, hernia, liver trouble, gall stones, gall bladder trouble and hemorrhoids. Conversely, the people of this group are apt to escape the disorders that the people of the other group claim for their own. Both lists represent generalizations, and if they are to be regarded as the rule, there must be many exceptions.

DEPENDS ON LOCATION.

Mrs. A. C. T. writes:

1. What is the cause of a baby being born with an obstruction in the food pipe near the throat?
2. Is it inherited, or is it caused by worry through pregnancy?
3. Can the baby live when operated on immediately after birth?
4. Is there any other cure for it besides operation?
5. How long can a baby live with such a defect?
6. Is it caused by injury while mother is giving birth under ether?

REPLY.

1. I do not know. As a rule, we do not know the cause of congenital defects.
2. Neither.
3. Depends on the location and nature of obstruction, as well as on the operation.
4. It is not clear what the defect is an where it is located.
5. Nor can this question be answered without more facts.
6. No.

CAUSE OF LUMBAGO.

C. D. C. writes: What is the cause of lumbago? What can be done for it?

REPLY.

Lumbago is a rheumatism of the muscles of the back. No other form of rheumatism is so easily remedied. The linaments so extensively sold made most of their reputations in the treatment of lumbago. Heat, hot baths, massage, use and light are also of service. Chronic lumbago yields better to good hygiene than does any other form of rheumatism.

Unfortunately, lumbago is not the only cause of pain in the back. Many such pains are charged unjustly to rheumatism. Arthritis of the spine and some other causes of back pains often charged to lumbago are more difficult to diagnose and still more difficult to cure.

Culbertson on Contract

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

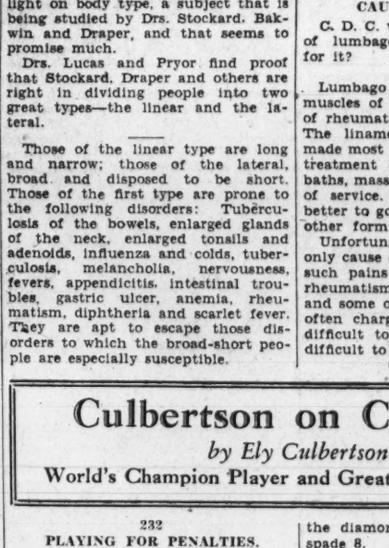
PLAYING FOR PENALTIES.

"NOW, partner, they are vulnerable. They can lose more," remarked an optimistic naval aviator to his wife and partner in a recent Contract Bridge game in Philadelphia in which Commander W. B. Howe held the South hand pictured below. It was a "Papa and Mama" game of family against family and the aviator loved to push his opponents when vulnerable beyond the trick-taking limits of their hands and then double for penalties. This was the hand:

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇	Dbl.	2♠(1)	Pass
4♠	5♣	5♠	Pass
Pass	6♣	Pass(2)	Pass
6♠	Pass(3)	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Showing 3 or more honor-tricks.
2—Having shown honor-trick strength, this was a Forcing pass, leaving to North the duty of doubling or bidding six spades.
3—Leaving for West to double or bid seven clubs.

West opened the club Knave which, East overtook and returned the heart five. When Commander Howe studied the combined hands, the Penalty Double looked to him like a gift from the gods. Three lines of play suggested themselves to him:

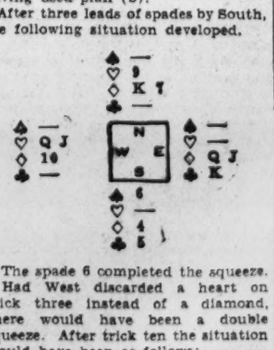
(a) Cross ruff, provided the spades were divided.
(b) Clearing the heart suit, provided hearts were divided.
(c) The squeeze.

South first decided to try plan (a). A small club was led, West discarding the diamond 6; Dummy played the spade 8.

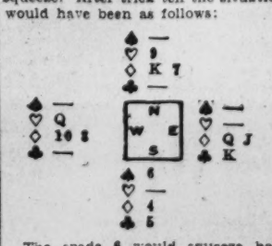
The spade distribution was now tested by a lead of the spade Queen, and South shifted to plan (c).

The spade Knave, then the diamond Ace and then the heart 3 were led from Dummy. At the heart lead South congratulated himself for not having used plan (b).

After three leads of spades by South, the following situation developed.



The spade 6 completed the squeeze. Had West discarded a heart on trick three instead of a diamond, there would have been a double squeeze. After trick ten the situation would have been as follows:



The spade 6 would squeeze both East and West.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Optimistic Penalty Doubles, particularly when based on freakish holdings, are dangerous and frequently result in increased losses for the Doubler.

THE NEW Jelleff's

What Today Means to You

"PISCES."

IF February 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:40 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., from noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:20 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 1:10 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10 p. m.

Astrological influences on February 22 will be an upsetting nature and you will feel ripe for storms, not for placidity. A day of intense activity with disportionate results is foreseen. No important decisions should be made until they have been slept over, as it will be difficult to see things in their proper light.

The child born on this February 22 will have a lovable, unselfish disposition, and it will be natural to it to be grateful and appreciative. It will have a calm, collected mind, and although not a brilliant student will grow into a most intelligent and capable adult.

Born February 22, yours is an imaginative, impressionable and rather spiritual nature. You are very receptive to all the conditions that are around you, and environment may be the making or the undoing of your character. You are rather lacking in life and energy, and decidedly lacking in initiative. You need to be pushed into doing things by some outside force, and your opportunities have to be pointed out to you. Your inspirational nature is highly developed, and you are often inspired to do things, seemingly by unseen forces. You know and feel many things, which you cannot materially prove, but which are true—this is especially true in regards to people.

You become very much attached to your friends, and are inclined to exaggerate all their good qualities and to minimize their faults. You will always attach yourself to someone on whom you can lean. You are very generous and love to give, and in your case it can truly be said that the giver goes with the gift. You are always quite willing to sacrifice your own comfort and well-being for the sake of another.

You will have a capacity for doing many things, and will probably never pursue any solo occupation. You are capable of putting your whole soul into your work, but you are not capable of "sticking" to anything until it becomes monotonous.

Successful People Born February 22nd:

1—Isaac Franklin North, president of American Soda Fountain Co.
2—George Washington, "The First American."
3—Charles McLean Andrews, professor Yale University.
4—Lew Cody, film artist.
5—Gen. Baden Powell, founder of Boy Scouts.
6—James Russell Lowell, poet.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

DIVORCE AND MARRIAGE.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: I read your advice to people every day and have enjoyed it so much and have always thought your advice so good. But your answer to Faithful hurt me. The part about "What God hath joined together," &c. When I was 18 I married a boy 20. We lived together two years and then parted after having one child, a boy. When I was 25 I married a man 32. We have been married now six years and have a boy of our own. Of course, I have my first child with me. My husband loves the child almost as much as his own, and is just as good to him. We are very, very happy and I love my husband more and more the longer I live with him. I never really loved my first husband as I was too young to know what real love was and he was very unkind to me, at times really cruel. Do you think I did wrong to divorce him and marry another man? Is this man I am married to really my husband? I can't help being a bit old-fashioned and some time wondering. I wish you would tell me what you think. I would feel better. I am glad Faithful is happy. SUE.

Sue, dear child, one of the hardest things about writing is the danger of being misunderstood. Now here you get from what we said, that we are opposed to divorce! Of all things! On the contrary we think that lack of respect should end marriage. It ends the sanctity of the relation so why not end the misery of it?

What we meant, Sue dear, was that divorce was a bigger gamble than marriage? That countless thousands who divorced each other after some trivial quarrel, spent the rest of their days in regretting their act. As an instance we were in court one day years ago when a young couple appeared asking divorce. His folks lined up on one side, hers on the other. The girl took the stand and began to tremble all over. She could not articulate. The judge spoke kindly to her. And that was enough. She just bawled like a baby. And the boy flew to her side. It was too much in-laws. The two poor youngsters involved had not seen each other in months and just seeing each other set them off. The judge severely condemned the parents and attorneys and forbade the relatives of either to even communicate with them for six months under penalty of contempt of court. That was a case where love still existed, and had they been parted no subsequent mate could ever have effaced that love.

Your case is entirely different. You married an inferior man in your youth, divorced him for just cause and saved yourself and your child years of such misery as only a woman bound to an unscrupulous mate can know. In your case divorce was your salvation. So please do not go on thinking that we are so benighted as to believe that there should be no divorce. We merely believe that many separate in pique and regret the rest of their lives. Just as many marry without thought—and pay the price of their thoughtlessness in years of loveless marriage that is not marriage at all. You are fortunate to have found your true mate and happiness at last. How ghastly to imagine that you and your child should have remained in misery when this love awaited you both! You write and tell us right away that you have read this answer and that you are no longer worrying. We believe in divorce when it works. Just as we believe in marriage—when it works. And you have made both divorce and marriage work have you not? So why the fussing?

SEVEN POST HOMES SOLD IN TWO WEEKS

Foxall Group Has Appealed to Public Since First Offered on Feb. 7.

Seven of the twelve "Homes of Tomorrow" in the final group of houses in Foxall, residential development of Waverly Taylor, Inc., have been sold since first announcement of their completion in The Washington Post, which sponsors them, two weeks ago. This statement was made yesterday by an official of the Taylor corporation.

Enthusiasm of the many visitors to these dwellings continues unabated. Those who inspect them are especially delighted with their spaciousness and sunniness. Great interest is shown in the decoration and furnishing of the exhibit "Home of Tomorrow," which opened for inspection February 7, at 4422 Volta place northwest, in Foxall. Most of the visitors have meticulously inspected the home, and all have expressed their satisfaction.

This home has been decorated and furnished by Woodward & Lothrop, presenting the conception of their interior decorating department of a modern American home.

In presenting this "Home of Tomorrow," The Washington Post is offering to the public an opportunity to inspect a home containing every modern convenience, combining beauty with labor-saving equipment which will satisfy the exacting demands of home seekers.

There are many unusual features in the architecture of this house, one of the most attractive being the studio suite on the third floor, with its gabled ceiling, artistic dormer windows and stippled walls. From the sun porch there is a commanding view of the Valley of the Potomac.

The Washington Post urges every home-loving person in the city to visit this rare example of the truly modern and worth-while home. It will be open daily for your unmolested inspection from 9:30 a. m. to 9:30 p. m., and can be reached by driving out Q street and Reservoir road to Forty-fourth street, then making a left turn three short blocks south to Volta place.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL.

THERE is a genuinely sinister implication—not that I have any desire to spoil your holiday!—in the colloquy between President Green of the American Federation of Labor and Representative William P. Connery, chairman of the labor committee of the House, as recorded in the RKO-Pathe News currently on the screen.

The gist of the matter is that Mr. Green corroborates Representative Connery's suggestion that his committee has caught wind of an "understanding" in big business circles that hired personnel is to be brought to an irreducible minimum and wages sympathetically clashed all along the line.

Of course, it has been generally known for many months that pay rolls have been gradually dwindling, but always it has been represented as necessitated by the pinch of hard times and the exigencies of the moment in each specific instance.

The brief shot in the newsreel gives the impression that the move toward reduction in numbers employed and the cuts in the wages of those who remain at work are more the outcome of deliberate conspiracy than any urge of economic necessity.

And the sound of that is not so good!

If the drizzle that is falling as this is being written Sabbath evening continues through the Washington's birthday holiday it may profit the theaters at the expense of the elaborate outdoor ceremonies, pageants, etcetera, thus proving again that it is an ill wind—and another etcetera.

The contingency is well provided for. Out-of-town visitors will find a majority of the motion picture houses open at 10 a. m., with five de luxe performances scheduled for the day. RKO-Keith's, the Fox and the Earle all will be open at 10, with first presentation of the feature pictures getting under way in some cases as early as 10:10 a. m., and stage shows shortly before or after noon. Consult "Film Time Tables," elsewhere on this page.

While the Belasco availed itself of an extra performance by opening the week's engagement of "Blossom Time" last night, the National will square accounts by inaugurating the seven-day run of Miss Lenore Ulric in "The Social Register" with a special holiday matinee today at the customary hour of 2:20.

A complimentary gesture was extended Miss Ethel Barrymore last Saturday noon by the Messrs. Rudolph Berger, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film exchange in the Capital, and Carter Barron, managing director of the loewcal Loew interests.

Suspecting, of a sudden, that Miss Barrymore might never have had an opportunity to preview her brothers, Lionel and John, in the newly completed screen version of "Arsene Lupin," in which both appear, a screening of the feature was hurriedly arranged for in the Fox Film exchange's private projection room, with Miss Barrymore as guest of honor immediately before her own matinee at the Belasco in Sheridan's "School for Scandal."

Having been prevented from attending by the shortness of the notice allowed by the thoughtful telephone call from Mr. Barron and the press of official reviewing duties, I am unable to report the "first lady's" reactions to the performance of her distinguished brothers, but dare say they were not adverse. It has long been her contention that Lionel is the best actor of all the Barrymores contemporaneously in harness.

It has frequently been remarked here of late that with the Earle and RKO-Keith's both frankly presenting vaudeville, and the Palace and Fox offering "revues" and "Ideas," respectively, on their stages, Washington is getting more of what was once termed "variety" acts per week than was ever the case when the two-a-day was in its hey-heyday! That is self-evident.

Our timorous suggestion that headliners might too quickly be used up if the brakes weren't speedily slammed on seems, on the contrary, to have been a fear ill-founded.

As was hinted in this column not so long ago as an imminent possibility, Paul Whiteman and his band have been definitely signed for an early appearance at RKO-Keith's. This will be the first public appearance of this famous organization in the National Capital since the Paul Whiteman afternoon concerts at Poli's many seasons ago.

It is my understanding that Whiteman and his versatile men will provide the entire stage entertainment, running approximately an hour. Since the Whiteman concert programs were of full two-hour-and-a-half duration and always left the udience clamoring for more, it is not too much to expect his vaudeville offering to be the richest 60 minutes ever offered on a local stage.

Oh, some time around Easter, I imagine—but don't take my word for it.

Well, well! Mr. Robert Heinl takes the trouble to call our attention to the fact that the New York Times lifted portions of our review of "Hot-Cha!" for its Sabbath dramatic section—with due credit, of course. I repeat, well, well! Not to mention that I'll be darned!

Reverting momentarily to the question of headliners, following the personal appearance of El Brendel, famous Philadelphia Swede of both stage and screen, at the Fox, beginning next Friday, the next star to appear will be Ben Lyon, just now doing a swell piece of work in support of Constance Bennett in "Lady With a Past," at RKO-Keith's.

Mr. Lyon, billed as "screenland's foremost leading man to screenland's foremost leading ladies," will be among those present the week of March 4, and in all probability will be accompanied by Mrs. Lyon—although not in a professional capacity—better known to the world's movie fans as Bebe Daniels. Appearing on the same bill will be Ben Bard, Hollywood's foremost master of ceremonies.

Another screen star who will arrive shortly after Mr. Lyon is Ruth Roland, heroine of many of the most thrilling of the early movie serials and recognized as one of the richest women in Hollywood, thanks to careful saving and sagacious real estate investments. Unless I am all balled up again, Miss Roland in private life is Mrs. Ben Bard.

And besides these, Harry Crull has a list of others no less important that he is lining up for personal appearances a little later on—so I hear.

The early days of the Great War are recalled by the keen rivalry among the newsreel makers in their efforts to score beats with first authentic pictures of the fighting on the Shanghai front in China.

The latest to enter the competition is Universal. The S. S. Empress of China, bearing negatives of the most recently photographed war scenes to come out of the Sino-Japanese conflict, was due to dock in Seattle yesterday. Universal, however, couldn't wait, but sent a seaplane to meet the liner 300 miles at sea, where, by special arrangement with the steamship company, the boat was stopped, a line shot to the plane, and the negatives transferred over a rope slide. This stunt to accelerate speed was insured by Universal for $25,000, the policy being operative for three hours only!

In Seattle the negatives were put on a land plane and whisked away to New York. The wire that Rodney Collier has just shown me states that these latest authentic views of the actual fighting will be on the screen at the Rialto Theater tomorrow afternoon or Wednesday morning. Quick, eh?

Holiday? Don't be silly. Just another Monday in this racket!

'BLOSSOM TIME." Noclin Corporation presents the operetta adapted from the original of A. M. Willner and H. Reichert, with book and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly, music from the melodies of Franz Schubert and H. Berte arranged by Sigmund Romberg. Staged by Edward Scanlon. Reviewed by W. A. Whitney.

A little over a decade ago there was conceived in the minds of Dorothy Donnelly and Sigmund Romberg an idea to recreate in operetta form the tragically beautiful story of Franz Schubert (1797-1828) and his frustrated love in a setting of his own immortal compositions.

It is small wonder that, even after an absence of several years, last night's performance was hailed as the finest play and mounted presentation of "Blossom Time" to come to the Capital.

Unlike that of most of the masters, the music of Schubert is particularly adapted to operetta arrangement, many of his more than 600 songs, brimming with tenderness, love, and passion of varying moods—the unconscious musicalization of his own life story. The symphonic achievements of the man, however, are not overlooked, for the always-to-be-remembered "Song of Love" is none other than the thematic strain of the Symphony No. 8 in B minor, the so-called "Unfinished" symphony.

Ever music to thrill the heart of the lover of the arts, the never-dying melodies took on added life with the superb singing of this company, the colorful lyrics blossoming with a dynamic beauty that more than fits the word to the deed. In the principal role is J. Charles Gilbert, as Schubert, who makes the man, who exists in the minds of many merely as a great composer, a real living being, frustrated in the consummation of a great love by an unfortunate similarity of names. The Baron von Schober, with whom the composer is confused, is swanki" played by Joseph F. Wilkins, who also adds one of the finest voices in the company.

Mitzi, the ebullient daughter of the court jeweler, and willing but baffled lover of the composer, is sung by Kathryn Reece in a manner that will not be soon forgotten. Robert Lee Allen is the most convincing buffo that has in a long while trod the local boards, his "shushpishuns," so excruciatingly enunciated, bubble out from his generous corporeal proportions and add that touch of humor to make the major plot all the more striking. Special mention should be paid Marie Starner's toe dance to the "Moment Musicale."

It is not so much the acting and the singing but the songs themselves that make "Blossom Time" the operetta it is. Of the many beautiful melodies, the "Serenade" and "Song of Love" are the outstanding.

Prefacing the performance and offering tribute to the occasion, the Belasco Orchestra plays the "Star-Spangled Banner," followed by the singing of George M. Cohan's Bicentennial "hymn" by the entire company.

NATIONAL

"ENGLAND AND WALES." The last of a series of five Sunday afternoon travel talks by E. M. Newman, illustrated with colored slides and motion pictures. Reviewed by William L. Wright.

To close his current series of travel lectures, "Seeing Europe—Impressions of 1931," E. M. Newman, the noted globe trotter, chose "England and Wales" for his subject yesterday afternoon. Very realistically, he brought to the screen all the charm and beauty of the rural English countryside.

Beginning at Stratford-on-Avon, birthplace of William Shakespeare, the vicarious journey transported one to the south of England. A short visit to Hathaway Farm and quaint Chipping Campden, down to Southampton, pausing on the way to see the Tewksbury pageant and so to Lands End.

Turning here, Mr. Newman continued along the coast through charming Lynton and Lynmouth to Bath and Clifton-Bristol. Some unusual views of its gorge and the River Avon proved extremely interesting.

After many beautiful scenes of the land of the Welch, encompassing many of their most picturesque villages, the trail turns northward through Chester, Birmingham and the commercial city of Manchester to the Peak district, where a visit was made to Harrogate, the finest of the British spas.

Fountains Abbey, without a doubt the most magnificent ruin in England, was a subject of great interest, as was also the great Cathedral at Lincoln.

Unusual motion pictures of typical English hunts, ridden to some of the finest packs of hounds, brought this extremely enjoyable tour to a picturesque and thrilling close.

THE
THE MOST WONDERFUL TRAIN IN THE WORLD
AIR COOLED AND CONDITIONED THROUGHOUT
IN SERVICE SUNDAY, APRIL 24

General Washington was not only the Father of Our Country. He was also the Father of Transportation in America.

Over the Allegheny Mountains he projected the Midland Trail to connect the colonies of the Atlantic Seaboard with the outposts of the Mississippi Valley.

Then, when the James River Company was organized in 1782 for a similar purpose, General Washington became its first President and was one of its original stockholders.

In 1879 the James River Company was absorbed by the Richmond and Allegheny Railroad Company, which in 1890 became one of the important links in the Chesapeake and Ohio System.

Thus the fine, fast trains of the C. & O. realize in fullest measure the 150-year-old dream of General Washington. They traverse the routes he laid out, and join the two areas as he planned.

Therefore, to George Washington, our first President, we pay honor in this great Bi-Centennial year and express our pride in his part in the early development of the Chesapeake and Ohio. We are doing this by creating, to bear his name, the most wonderful train in the world; air cooled and conditioned throughout, and with a host of other surprises.

You will be invited to inspect The George Washington before it goes into service, Sunday, April 24.

IN CO-OPERATION WITH THE GEORGE WASHINGTON BI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

"You'll keep MORE MEN at WORK...

...by keeping those Dollars of yours in circulation!"

Talk about wealth! This country of ours is the richest in the world. We've got plenty of resources. We've got plenty of money.

That's not the problem. It's the idle money that's holding us back. The dollars withdrawn from circulation that aren't working . . . that aren't earning interest.

We've got to keep our money at work . . . if we want to see America prosperous.

Money at work . . . means men at work. It keeps factories running . . . wheels turning . . . raw materials pouring in.

Perhaps you think your money doesn't count.

But it does count . . . however little it may be. The modest resources of millions of citizens add up to a tremendous sum . . . enough to give American Industry a great big helping hand.

Every dollar you keep in circulation . . . releases 5 to 10 for credit. Every dollar "withdrawn" is a slacker . . . working against your country in its time of need.

Talk to the ablest business men you know. Let them point out ways to keep your dollars safe . . . where they will earn interest for you and create jobs for others.

Buy what you need. Spend in relation to your income. But keep your money where it will do yourself and your country the most good . . . AT WORK!

That's the way to help America Turn the Tide.

Thanks!

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

IF WASHINGTON TALKED IN THE MODERN MOOD.

Q. General, what do you think of the outlook?

A. Terrible. I never saw conditions so bad.

Q. Some colonists say a turn is just around the corner. What is your opinion about that, general?

A. I hope they're right, but I doubt it. It'll take years for us to get out of our present predicament.

Q. But the colonies have had troubles before this and come back quickly, have they not?

A. Yes, but never anything as serious as this. We're in a new era. The old standards don't go any more. The whole world is in a bad way.

Q. Don't you think there is any prospect of a telling blow at the British forces?

A. Not this winter, and probably not before next fall. Conditions are not right for it. We've got to wait for our army to recover confidence.

Q. Do you see any future for America?

A. Not much. I used to be an optimist on the country, but we all went too far. We let inflation go too far.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Why, look at the false standards of values that were prevailing. The people lost their heads. They were paying Indians as high as three strings of beads for 1,000 acres of land. That was ridiculous.

Q. Have you any other explanation of the plight of the American colonists at this time?

A. Yes, high living. For the last few years they've gone in too much for luxuries. They got so they expected fresh bear meat more than once a week. They weren't satisfied with plain log cabins but wanted shutters on 'em. They got to traveling from Boston to New York by coach instead of walking. It softened 'em up. When adversities and this war came on they couldn't stand it.

* * * *

Q. Don't you think the people can come back?

A. In time, but they've got to get back to plain living. The time-payment system of business was one thing that hurt the country. Instead of buying only such land as they could afford, the colonists were purchasing two and three square miles of land from the Indians for one pocket-mirror down and the rest over a period of years. They got used to easy living. That's why it's so hard to get 'em to do any effective fighting in this war.

Q. But surely you don't regard the outlook as hopeless?

A. Pretty much so. We've got to go through a period of readjustment and deflation.

Q. One last question, general. Have you anything in mind that you feel the American Congress might do to facilitate an early victory over the British and the rehabilitation of the colonies?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What is it?

A. I favor the appointment of a commission to investigate and report!

FLORIDA JOY KILLER.

Here I lie upon the sand,
With one garment on me, and Comfortable in a breeze
As I take my fill of ease.

Tanned am I by torrid sun
In a land where cares are none;
Balmy is the ocean air
Where each day is bright and fair.

Still my joy is tempered some
By the postal cards that come
Telling me—and am I blue?—
That back home it's pleasant, too!

It may come to pass that what most people thought was a wolf at the door was nothing but a mechanical rabbit.

Paderewski packed Madison Square Garden recently and it is belatedly reported that at the height of his concert a fight fan in the gallery blurted out, "There's a boy with a wonderful left hand!"

MONDAY FEBRUARY 22, 1932 SPORTS

MARBERRY, SPENCER AT BILOXI TO DISCUSS TERMS

A.A.U. Teams Have 2 Days To Enter

Lists for Championship Tournament to Close Tomorrow.

Play Opens March 1 at Tech; Draws Best Clubs.

THE biggest basket ball tournament on the Atlantic Coast, the annual court rally staged by the District A. A. U. and The Washington Post, draws near to springing into existence as the final two days of registration begin this morning. Entries ring down tomorrow night at 12 o'clock at The Post sports department and the gigantic tournament moves into action March 1 at Tech High's massive gymnasium.

The sports department of The Post and the office of Charles M. Fyfe, at the Boys Club, will work overtime today and tomorrow accommodating the last-minute boys, a boom which is likely to bring into the tournament the final few straggling teams in Washington which already have not signed up.

Variety of Teams Entered.

If for some reason the District A. A. U. was to take up all the teams in the tournament, and transport them outside the District, Washington's basket ball courts would be as hollow as a series of bass drums. It seems that every institution, community, church, school and even street corner has contributed a team to the tournament, ranging from bands of youths hardly able to shoot a regulation ball much higher than the basket, up to grown men and women.

Since The Post was instrumental in starting this annual classic, Washington's basket ball teams have realized that tournament competition is the only method of improving a team. When a club goes on the floor against another, it knows it must produce its finest play to survive.

It gives a team a chance to play clubs it ordinarily would never meet. It strengthens ties of friendships and serves to help teams arrange next season's schedules through the medium of the acquaintances made.

And thus but two days remain. Players in the lighter classes will be weighed in at the Boys Club later this week.

Friends Five Takes Two Games on Trip

Friends School continued its winning ways over the week-end, adding two games to the right side of the ledger. Bob Boyle led the team to victory over Camp Chesapeake Friday, when Friends triumphed on the latter's floor, 37 to 27. Ray Dodge topped the scorers in the game with Christ Church Saturday, which was decided by a score of 33 to 18 in the local team's favor.

Ruth-Burke Beaten In Golf Exhibition

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Babe Ruth and Billy Burke were beaten, 3 and 1, in an exhibition golf match here today by Joseph B. Schlotman, Detroit, and Walter Hagen, former national and British open champion.

Schlotman shot a 69, Hagen a 70, Burke, national open champion, a 72, while Ruth had a 77 in the best-ball event.

Roebuck and Szabo In Strand Feature

"League of Nations" Card Thursday; Kley Due Another Test.

The customary "League of Nations" wrassling card will be presented Thursday night at the Strand Theater, headed by a match between Sandor Szabo, handsome Hungarian bone bender, and Tiny Roebuck, a former resident of Washington, former all-American tackle and former Haskell Indian.

From the tepee we jump to the steppes of Russia, whence springs Wankah Zelesniak, a cabbage-eared old veteran, who meets Fritz Kley, a German who would have been a trapeze artist or a South Sea Island hipper had he not been given a 200-pound chassis and a hankering for the old profession of grunts and growls.

Then there is Sammy Stein, who meets Paul Favre, a Gaul.

Surprisingly enough two Americans appear on the card, something of a break in tradition. They are Doc Wilson and Leon Smith. Another bout will be added during the week. Ladies are free with escorts.

Week's Program Of College Sports

Basket ball—George Washington vs. Rider, at Trenton, N. J.

Track—Catholic University third annual indoor carnival at Brookland Gymnasium.

11 EVENTS ON HE-NIGHT CARD

Raymond-Young Are Featured in Ring at Airport Tonight.

RED-BLOODED sport will hold forth tonight at Congressional Airport, on the Rockville pike, where the Rockville Fire Department stages its annual He-Night show of boxing and wrestling. Eleven events are carded, beginning at 8 o'clock, and nominal prices will prevail.

In the main boxing event of eight rounds Lou Raymond, clever, stiff-punching Baltimore welterweight, will meet Pepper Young, veteran Norfolk, Va., battler, who appeared here last summer. Raymond recently defeated Sammy Braunstein at Portner Arena, winning a host of followers on the strength of a polished performance. He probably will be favored to defeat Young.

De Beve to Attempt Comeback.

Arthur De Beve, former lightweight champion of France, will emerge from retirement to battle Jimmy "Sailor" McKenna in the semiwindup of eight rounds. De Beve has not fought since last July, when he defeated Mickey Diamond at Laurel. The Frenchman in his heydey was one of the fastest boxers in the world, with a machine-gun attack. He has been training faithfully for the past month for his comeback. McKenna is younger and probably stronger and should furnish De Beve plenty of opposition.

Joe Turner, Washington's wrestling impresario, will don the tights for one more of his crowd-pleasing performances. He will meet Frank Cray in a time-limit bout sandwiched between the ring encounters. Another event of mat flavor will be contested between a wrestler and boxer yet to be named.

Jimmy Tramberia and Marino Marini, lightweights, respectively, of Baltimore and Washington, will swap blows in the main preliminary of six rounds. Tramberia is an experienced gladiator and is expected to give the determined Italian the stiffest test of his career.

Billy Essinger and Sailor Oden, who fought a furious scrap at Portner Arena two months ago, will stage a return go in one of the four-round preliminaries, in which also will appear Soldier Clark vs. Billy Britten, and Tommy Horn vs. Bob Portna.

A regulation fistic bout between two females and a number of dances by Mary Hipple's troupe complete the program.

Washington Stakes At Lucky Strike Today

The George Washington Sweepstakes, to be staged by Bill Wood at his Lucky Strike alleys today, will have the field all to itself, no other bowling events of importance being on the schedule. Because of the reduced entry fee—$15—a large turnout is expected. The stakes will consist of fifteen games, divided into three blocks. The first five games will be rolled at 11 a. m., the second at 2 p. m. and the wind-up will be staged at 8 p. m.

In addition to the major prizes, the size of which will necessarily be governed by the number competing, there will be two prizes awarded for the high game and set of each block.

CALVARY WOULD PLAY.

The Calvary M. E. unlimited quintet has regained the use of its gym and would like to book a game with a strong team for tomorrow night. Teams interested are requested to call Manager Gotwals at Georgia 1680-J.

Track Stars Vie Tonight For Titles

Venzke, Toppino and Spitz Chief Centers of Interest.

Sturdy, Beard, Hinkle Aiming to Retain Championships.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The major indoor track season in the East, one of the most exciting and important in several years, comes to a close this week with the National A. A. U. championships on tomorrow night and the annual Knights of Columbus games on Saturday night in Madison Square Garden. The closed intercollegiate championships put a final period to the season March 5.

Leading performers of the winter who will complete their indoor seasons in the two meets this week are Gene Venzke, Emmett Toppino and George Spitz. All three are record holders, but none of them holds a national title, a State of affairs all expect to remedy tomorrow night.

Shining light of the trio is Venzke, 23-year-old high school student of Pottstown, Pa., who has twice broken the world indoor record for the mile, his latest efforts placing the time at 4:10, two seconds faster than Paavo Nurmi and Joie Ray ran it in setting the old standard in 1925. Gene will run the mile in the nationals and then will drop down to the Olympic distance of 1,500 meters for the K. of C. games.

Spitz Seeking Title.

Spitz has twice broken his own indoor high jump record, raising the standard to 6 feet 8½ inches. He will be seeking a title tomorrow which eluded him in his first effort last year when he appeared to suffer considerably from stage fright.

Toppino has not broken any records this winter, but three times in the space of ten days he tied the universal standard of 6 1-5 seconds for the 60-yard sprint.

Second only to the above group on the basis of the season's record to date is Leo Sexton, former Georgetown athlete, now competing for the New York A. C., who is undefeated this year in the shot put and 35-pound weight throw, and last week set a new indoor standard for the shot of 52 feet 8⅜ inches.

Veterans Would Hold Crowns.

Overshadowed by the younger stars, but still fine performers in any field are other champions who will be seeking to regain lost laurels this week. Among them are Fred Sturdy, in the pole vault; Leo Lermond, in the mile walk, and Percy Beard, world's record holder outdoors, in the 70-yard high sticks.

Joe McCluskey, Fordham youngster and one of the headliners of the 1930-31 season, is reaching peak form in his specialty, the 2-mile run, and there are a host of evenly matched runners in the middle distances with Alex Wilson, of Notre Dame and Dale Letts, of the Illinois A. C. A bit ahead of the pack, all of them entered for the two closing meets.

The Nationals for the first time this year will have the mile and 3-mile runs and the 35-pound weight throw. The standing high and broad jumps have been dropped.

Defending Champ Bows At Squash Racquets

Baltimore, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Philadelphia and Harvard today survived the semifinal rounds of team play in the national squash racquet tournament and meet in the finals tomorrow. Harvard defeated New York, 4 to 1, and Philadelphia eliminated Buffalo 3 to 2.

J. Lawrence Pool, New York, the 1931 champion, was eliminated in the first quarter-final match of individual play today by T. E. Jansen, Boston, 15-11, 11-15, 15-10, 15-11.

His brother, Beckman Pool, of Harvard, advanced through the quarter and semifinals and will meet Jansen in the finals tomorrow.

Navy Brings Squad Of 28 to C. U. Meet

Entry Largest in Carnival Saturday; Nine Represent William and Mary.

The United States Naval Academy has entered a squad of 28 athletes for the third annual Catholic University indoor track carnival, scheduled Saturday night in Brookland gymnasium. The Navy entry list is the largest in the meet, exceeding that of William and Mary, next largest, by exactly nine men.

The Annapolis entries are: F. E. Highley and Edgar J. Hailey, mile run; G. MacKenzie, John Waybright, W. H. Baumberger, B. F. Walkup, A. B. Robbins, and John Vaughn, sprinters; Dabney Waters, R. H. O'Kame, H. C. Davis and G. B. Nicol, quarter-miler; W. T. Griffith, W. C. Mott, and Scott Gibson, two-milers; C. Pilcher and F. M. Whitaker, and William Cox, hurdlers; J. T. Bingham and E. C. Connaway, jumpers, and Ward Hardman, middle distance runner. Paul Burton, Gwen Fang, Harold Bowen and James Compton will form a two-mile relay team, while W. Coleman, John Waybright, Walter Newton, Frank Whitaker and Bob Evans will compose a 1-mile relay team.

Coach Dorsey Griffith of the host institution expects to enter a strong team representing Catholic U. In previous competition this year the Cardinals have given promise of surpassing records in the history of the track sport at the Brookland school.

In the Ryan 1,000-yard run, feature event of the program, Coach Griffith expects to enter Felix Farris and Bob Connor, who ran one-two in the handicap 1,000 yards of the recent Meadowbrook games.

8 Prep School Quintets Open Bicentennial Sports Program Today in Championship Tournament

Friends Meets Gonzaga, Starting Play at 2:30 at George Washington U. Gym; Three Other Contests.

OPENING the local Bicentennial sports year, The Post's prep school basket ball championship will swing onto operation today at 2:30 o'clock at George Washington University with eight crack teams toeing the mark for the race which will decide the city's best prep court team.

Seats will be at a premium at this afternoon's two games and tonight's two, for there is no admission charge, nor will there be one for the remainder of the tournament, tomorrow afternoon and night, and Wednesday night. Handsome programs, suitably inscribed to match the George Washington Bicentennial aspect of the tournament, will be distributed free of charge.

To Friends School and Gonzaga go the honor of putting the tournament in progress today. Following their game, which is scheduled at 2:30 o'clock, Georgetown Prep and Emerson will play. Georgetown Prep has been seeded second in the tournament. Tonight, at 8 o'clock, St. Alban's, one of the several dark horses in the pack, takes on the seasoned little Landon Team, and at 9 o'clock the howitzers of the meet, St. John's, open their campaign with Devitt offering stern competition.

Four teams will be left after tonight's fireworks, and these will be matched tomorrow, two of them surviving until Wednesday when the title will be decided. St. John's and Georgetown Prep have been seeded No. 1 and No. 2 in the tournament; that is, they have been placed at the top and bottom of the list of teams, to keep them from meeting until the final round, provided they can withstand the competition along the way.

As the tournament starts there is little to choose between six of the eight teams. Just a shade behind St. John's and Georgetown Prep is Gonzaga, Devitt, Friends and St. Alban's. Emerson and Landon are pitched a mite below these, but full able to score a rousing upset.

The stage is set! The road is clear for the first general matching of all the prep schools, something that was thought unattainable until The Post and George Washington University took the initiative last week. The teams, bristling with individual stars and famed teamwork, are rarin' to go, spurred on by the desire to be crowned champion, to gain possession of The Post Trophy, and to be the club which will be pitted against Eastern in a charity game next Friday, pending the sanction of the superintendent of schools.

Two more trophies were added to the list last night. As is customary in scholastic tournaments sponsored by universities, special awards will be made to "the most valuable player" and to the scorer of the most points. Coaches of the eight teams will be asked to rule on the awards. The most valuable player will be given a silver cup and the high-point scorer a miniature figure of a player.

SKINKER FIVE FINDS VICS EASY

Evans Is Eagle Star With 19 Points in 42-23 Victory.

UPHOLDING, if not adding a bit to their prestige as the semipro champions of the city, the Skinker Eagles romped off with a 42-23 victory over the challenging Vic's Sport Shop before a large and thoroughly surprised crowd at Silver Spring yesterday, it was the first game in the series between the two to decide the 1932 titleholder.

"Moon" Evans, looking more like a Mark Twain character come to life, with his tattered pants, tousled hair and freckled countenance, than a basket ball player, stole the show from the old masters, Joe Sweeney and Ralph Bennie, with his clever all-around play. Evans tallied eight times from the field and thrice from the foul line to lead both teams in scoring with nineteen points. In addition he played a great floor game, holding Sweeney to 7 points and making life generally miserable for the Vic leader.

Eagles Jump Into 11-to-2 Lead.

Roaring along like an eight-cylinder Packard fresh from the factory, the Eagles piled up an 11-to-2 lead over their opponents before the fans had settled down in their seats. Eight of these points were chalked up by Evans, who was the proud posesssor of an overheated hand. Vic's inaugurated a rally in the waning moments of the first period that carried over into the second and to within 2 points of the Eagles. But with the scoreboard reading 12 to 10 in the Eagles' favor, the latter applied the pressure and stepped away like a racing car passing a truck. Vic's trailed, 19 to 10, at the half.

The eventual winners started the final period on the long end of a 35-to-12 count, and with the game safely in the win column, eased up. Ralph Bennie and Julie Radice, No. 44, pants and all, performed in stellar fashion for the Eagles. Wally Hayes, who was to have opposed "Duke" Allen at center, was pitted against Al Heagy when Allen was unavoidably detained. Though Hayes played a good game for his team, Heagy was his equal. Jake Goldblatt topped the losers in scoring with 8 points.

New York Judge Gets Pinehurst Golf Ace

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Supreme Court Justice Harry L. Taylor of Buffalo, N. Y., did an expert bit of judging here today. Playing the number one golf course here he hit his tee shot on the 149-yard eleventh hole with such perfect judgment that it went into the cup.

It was his first hole-in-one after a dozen years of golf. Playing with Justice Taylor were E. W. Jones and H. C. Hutcheson, of Buffalo, and F. T. Findlay, of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Coral Gables Golf To Toomer-Aycock

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 21 (A.P.). Sinking two eagle 3s as dusk hovered over the course, Jack Toomer, Jacksonville, Fla., won for himself and Tommy Aycock, also of Jacksonville, Fla., the crown of the first international amateur four-ball match here by defeating T. Philip Perkins, former British amateur champion, and Howard Tryon, Detroit, 1 up in 37 holes.

Connie Mack on Job; Boley Back With A'S

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—Feeling "fit as a fiddle," Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, arrived here this afternoon from Mount Plymouth prepared to take his charges out to Terry Park tomorrow and start the eighth spring training season for the team here.

Although a considerable number of the more than 30 players on the A's training roster this spring already here, many of the regulars and recruits are due tomorrow morning.

Joe Boley, recently reported sold to Cleveland, will return to the Athletic camp, Connie made known tonight, as the deal was upset by a ruling by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner.

There will be little hard work for the players for the first day or so, Connie said, and the training grind will not start in earnest much before the middle of the week.

RUNYAN WINS $4,000 OPEN TOURNEY

Macfarlane Defeated as Putter Fails in Finals, 3 and 1.

PALMA CEIA GOLF CLUB, Tampa, Fla., Feb. 21 (A..P.).—Young Paul Runyan, of Portchester, N. Y., today won the jack pot of pirates' gold in the $4,000 Gasparilla open golf tournament here, defeating Willie MacFarlane, the Tuckahoe, N. Y., Scotsman, three and one, in the 36-hole final round.

Runyan received $925 in gold, while MacFarlane's purse as runner up was $625 in gold. The purses were presented by G. A. Hansen, captain of the Gasparilla Krewe, "pirate" band that annually captures Tampa in the pre-Lenten festival season.

Runyan eliminated Tony Manero, of Elmhurst, N. Y., in the semifinal, while MacFarlane defeated Bill Mehlhorn, of New York.

MacFarlane's Putter Fails.

The 36-hole final presented a picture of a veteran golfer, seasoned in years of big money campaigning, breaking under the pressure applied by a good golfer with youth and ambition on his side. MacFarlane's putter, usually his most deadly weapon, failed him in the pinches, and several times he missed birdies by inches when he would have won the holes had the ball dropped in.

Runyan made few errors, and when he did came right back to whang out sensational shots and recover. He was three up at noon, shooting 34—34—68, as MacFarlane required 35—36—71.

In the afternoon round MacFarlane whittled the advantage down a hole, but Runyan came back to regain it, and then increased it to four up. MacFarlane won two holes in succession, then with pars as Runyan suffered a lapse, but the youngster pulled himself together and won the thirty-third and thirty-fifth with pars, although he lost the thirty-fourth to MacFarlane's par.

Burke Absent And Termed Holdout

Johnson Orders First Workout Today for Batterymen.

Nats' Squad Greeted by Brass Band and Biloxi Mayor.

Special to The Washington Post.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 21—Thirteen Washington players are marking time here tonight awaiting the first call of the baseball season, due tomorrow morning when Manager Walter Johnson, aided and abetted by Trainers Mike Martin and Frank Baxter and Coaches Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, starts the task of whipping his players into condition for the 1932 flag race.

Most of the players arrived here during the day and were on hand to make up the welcoming committee when the squad, which left the Capital City Saturday, arrived. Pitcher John Boyle was the only playing member when the Nat leader shooed his party on the train, but Pitcher "Bud" Thomas and Catcher Cliff Bolton were picked up en route.

Only Bob Burke Missing.

Of those ordered to report, only Pitchers Bobby Burke, Monte Weaver and Mike Delaney are missing, and Burke already has been listed as a holdout. He is putting up a fight for more money. The other two who have not yet reached salary agreements with President Clark Griffith, Pitcher Fred Marberry and Catcher Roy Spencer, showed up to continue their contractual debates with the Nat owner personally. They probably will not be allowed to put on a uniform tomorrow unless they either sign up or show some signs of being about ready to.

Regarding Burke's case, Griffith said: "I offered him a raise, but Burke wants a bigger one. I don't know why he's holding out, unless its on the strength of that no-hit game he pitched last year. Anyway, I've made him my last offer."

Biloxi turned out en masse to welcome the Nationals. A large crowd, headed by Mayor Kennedy and a brass band, was at the station, with the mayor making a welcoming speech before the Nats jumped into automobiles for their hotel.

Pitchers Carl Fischer, Al Crowder and Fred Marberry arrived this afternoon by auto and found "Lefty" Lloyd Brown the lone regular on the job. A train which preceded that of Manager Johnson by about an hour brought the rest of the players. On it Friedrich, Frank Ragland and Catchers Howard Maple and Ed Gharrity.

May Ban Catcher's Mitts.

"Not only will no baseball be played tomorrow, but I don't believe I will even allow any catcher's mitts to be brought out," said Johnson, in speaking of his plans for the initial drill.

"I'm planning to start off slowly, but to make up lots of ground when the pitchers pass the first three stages. First, they must get used to throwing easily, then to putting on some speed, and, finally, to curving the ball, and they have to be watched closely through all of these stages of advancement.

"Trainer Martin will dole out the amount of running each man needs to get off excess weight, and there probably will be plenty of this work, although tomorrow will be used merely to get the kinks out of the boys' muscles. A little running, a few games of catch and a pepper game will round up the program.

"This pepper game is harder than it looks," Johnson concluded, "and it is an important item in our training routine. The fellow with the bat is kept busy bunting and the fielders have to dart to either side, to jump or to charge in, the result being that practically every muscle in the body is called into play and much good results. For the next two or three days the players will be allowed to go along fairly easy, but after that I guarantee that they will be glad when each daily session ends."

Tickets for Kocsis-Welsh Show Go on Sale Today

TICKETS for the all-star boxing card at Ritchie Coliseum next Monday night go on sale today at four points of distribution in the downtown section. The pasteboards may be procured at the Willard Hotel, Spalding's, 1338 G street; Vic's, Ninth and Grant streets, and Ahearn's, Ninth and E streets.

Indications are that a banner crowd will pack the new Maryland University athletic plant for the show, which is featured by an eight-round bout for the Southern bantamweight title between Antol Kocsis, Hungarian champion, and Dick Welsh, prominent Norfolk battler.

Three other eights and a four-round preliminary complete the program. In the other eights Buster Brown, clever Baltimore lightweight, will meet Louie Jallos, former Cleveland Golden Glove champion; Eric Lawson, Newport News light-heavyweight contender, will engage Vince Forgione, veteran Philadelphia boxer, and Billy Strickler, rugged local light-heavy, will oppose Al Treanor, another Philadelphian.

The principals for the preliminary have not as yet been selected, but the management promises to match two outstanding youngsters of this vicinity.

Ivry Wins Feature Chase at Auteuil

Auteuil, France, Feb. 21 (A.P.).—L. Ducom's Ivry won the Prix Robert Henessy; a 3,500-meter steeplechase handicap, which featured the reopening of Auteuil's track today. La Fregate was second and Bouchon third.

The race carried a purse of 50,000 francs (about $1,950).

Maryland Draws Florida In Conference Tournament

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 21 (A.P.).—The Southern Conference basket ball committee today selected Maryland, Kentucky, Auburn and Alabama—the four teams with the best season's record—as the seeded quartet for the championship tournament starting here next Friday, February 26.

Maryland and Kentucky have nine victories and one defeat, while Auburn has nine victories and two defeats and Alabama has eleven wins and three losses.

Maryland, the 1931 champion, will face Florida in its first game Friday, while Kentucky, runner-up last year, engages Tulane. Auburn tackles N. C. State and Alabama meets Virginia.

The tournament pairings were so arranged that none of the teams would meet a first-round opponent that they had played during the regular season.

Friday's program, with the starting times, follows: 1 p. m., Virginia vs. Alabama; 2 p. m., North Carolina vs. Tennessee; 3 p. m., Vanderbilt vs. Duke; 4 p. m., Kentucky vs. Tulane; 5 p. m., Maryland vs. Florida; 7 p. m., Auburn vs. N. C. State; 8 p. m., Georgia vs. Mississippi State; 9 p. m., Louisiana State vs. Georgia Tech.

The winner of the Maryland-Florida game will play the Vanderbilt-Duke victor in the first half of the upper bracket. In the second half Georgia and Mississippi are paired with Virginia and Alabama.

In the lower bracket Auburn and N. C. State are paired with L. S. U. and Georgia Tech, and N. C. and Tennessee are paired with Tulane and Kentucky.

The seven teams which will not participate in the titular tournament are V. M. I., Sewanee, Clemson, V. P. I., Washington and Lee, South Carolina and Mississippi.

BROWN-WEINER PROMISE FIGHT FANS PLENTY OF ACTION

Sluggers Top Day Nursery Program

Weiner, Hard Hitter, May Slip Over a Knockout.

Kirkwood - Raymond in Semifinal Tomorrow Night.

THEY'LL leave the scientific stuff at home, these huskies slated to perform for the faithful tomorrow night in Portner Arena, Alexandria. From Natie Brown and Herman Weiner—the principals in the main event—down to the obscure preliminary boys, the contestants exemplify the type of slugger who holds the fancy of local fight audiences.

The fans have seen both Brown and Weiner strut before, and if this pair puts on another of its torrid exhibitions, the show will be a complete success regardless of what happens in the preliminary milling.

Brown Noted as Body Puncher.

Brown is a body puncher, a driving-in sort, who bends his head and charges into his opponent with both hands working like pistons. Weiner, however, fights more at long range than the Philadelphian, but rushes inside when he finds an opening for his touted left hook.

The big question about this tiff is whether Brown can wear down Weiner to capture the decision. Observers claim that Natie does not possess a knockout punch and that he will have to keep pounding Weiner about the body if he hopes to win the nod. But in Weiner's case there exists a strong possibility that he may win by a knockout, inasmuch as his powerful left, when struck squarely, has floored many a foe in the past. Local fans have seen Paul Berlenbach, Marty Gallagher, Reds Barry and the veteran Mike Sullivan hit the deck under the force of Herman's left hook.

Walter Kirkwood, of Norfolk, and Joey Raymond, of Baltimore, are expected to provide a slam-bang battle in the eight-round semifinal. These 160-pounders can throw plenty of leather, and since both seek further employment hereabouts the crowd may look for sincere effort all the way. Kirkwood is the speedier and probably the more clever on defense, but in a slugging match he is not likely to attempt to show these qualities. Raymond is said to be the stronger puncher.

Perry and Belt on Program.

Jack Perry and Jesse Belt, whose old-fashioned, up-from-the-floor walloping stood the fans on their ears two weeks ago, are coming back in the prelims, but not opposed to each other. Perry appears in the main six-round preliminary against Benny Tillman, Hazleton, Pa., junior welter, while Belt engages Jack Quigley, ambitious local 140-pounder.

The show will be opened by a four-rounder between Battling Casey, of Baltimore, and Yeung Van, Washington middleweight, who scored a one-round kayo in his professional debut last Tuesday night. Van is one of the few novices to crash the paid ranks in the last year who knows how to punch. His shots are straight with both hands.

Army Medicos List Ring and Mat Bouts

Sixteen rounds of boxing and 70 minutes of wrestling will be presented free of charge tomorrow night at the Army Medical Center. The program will be staged in the Red Cross House, starting at 8 o'clock. The public is invited and special accomodations are offered ladies.

In the main boxing event, Nick Stipetic will meet Red Wright for six rounds. George Bills and Waldo Berry will clash in the main wrestling bout for 30 minutes. The boxing semifinal of four rounds will be fought by Lu Mancine and Bill Hail, while John Danko and Lu Auble will contest the 15 minute mat semifinal. Jack Kinser will oppose Lu Junker and K. O. Spidel will encounter Biff Konkel in the ring preliminaries of 3 rounds each. Dee Stump and Ad Whitman will wrestle 10 minutes and Harry Nixon will engage Floyd North in a wrestling exhibition for 15 minutes.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS. —By John Hix

THREE miles from the shore of Great Salt Lake is located Antelope Island. Despite the fact that the island is entirely surrounded by salt water, it has some 15 excellent fresh water springs, and one of the finest sheep ranches to be found in the West.

Heretofore, the only means of transportation between the island and the shore has been by boat or horse team. Although when horse teams are used, the water on the 3-mile course is seldom more than a foot deep, automobiles have tried it time and time again, only to become mired in the mud at the bottom of the lake. It is a 2-day journey from the ranch on the island to Salt Lake City and return; a distance of 48 miles.

Bob Henderson shortened the round trip by 44 hours, and crossed the 3-mile stretch of buoyant water in 15 minutes. The first trip via automobile was made with the aid of giant balloon tires.

First, the trip was attempted with a car equipped with ordinary balloons, but it became embedded up to the hubs in the soft mud.

Henderson, with his newly equipped car, towed the first car back to shore and then set out to make the trip himself. In 15 minutes he had reached the island, and in a few minutes more, he had traveled 6 miles to the ranch house, across two feet of snow.

The first known complete set of false teeth was carved from ivory, and made its appearance in England about the year 1750. In place of suction plates, the teeth were equipped with springs to hold them in the mouth. They were first worn by a Mr. Wilson, who handed them down to his son. They were used by the Wilson family for 145 years.

—Hialeah Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Feb. 21.—On the holiday program at Hialeah Park tomorrow, the George Washington Purse, a claiming event, fashioned for 4-year-olds and upward, headlines the card. The contest will be decided over the gruelling mile-and-an-eighth route. The supporting card is made up of claiming events, with the usual cheap platers performing.

LION HEARTED, which has shown consistent form over a route, is selected to capture the main event. This J. P. Musgrave starter closed gamely last start to finish second to El Puma. With a stronger boy in the saddle, he should experience little difficulty. SILVERY and RED FACE figure close up and should divide the remainder of the purse.

FIRST RACE — KITTY BRUCE showed a clever performance last outing and is the choice to graduate. NATIVE WIT was backed into favoritism in her first start, but was practically left at the post. With better luck, the J. E. Widener filly may offer stern opposition. SPANISH FLIRT appears best of the others for the minor award.

SECOND RACE—VIA APPIA, second to Modesto, displayed a clever effort which, if repeated here, would return her the winner. SHAVINGS has raced consistently and is the place selection, with LADY BRACADALE third.

THIRD RACE — BOUNDING DEEP lost a decision by a nose the other day. With that effort as a conditioner, the B. B. Stable's starter figures best of his fifteen opponents. MONTGOMERY MAID raced far below her best form last outing, and is capable of a better showing. SIR BYRON figures to annex the show money.

FOURTH RACE — JAMES RIVER, G. D. Widener's steady St. James colt, holds a slight edge over his rivals. FLASH O'WHITE displayed a brilliant effort to score last start, and is favored for the place. CATHERINE FOX is at the peak of her form, and should show.

SIXTH RACE—PORT HARLEM will favor the short 5½ furlongs, and figures to show the way to her six rivals. ELLICE scored over a cheap lot last outing, but is given the place call in this number. FLOSSINE has not been out in some time, but has trained well, and, on recent workouts, may battle it out with the top two.

SEVENTH RACE—WAR SAINT figures to improve enough to gain the honors. The G. D. Widener color bearer finished second to Traitor last time. BOSAFABO may falter at the route, but, nevertheless, is favored for the place. The minor share of the purse should fall to FORT DEARBORN.

Capital Well Represented in Play to Open Saturday.

Special to The Washington Post.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 21.—The Maryland State men's indoor tennis championships, the seventh annual, will start next Saturday afternoon on the Fifth Regiment Armory court. The matches will begin at 2 p. m., and continue on until 10 p. m. There will be singles and doubles and consolation singles. Elmer Rudy, the present title holder who is also the municipal outdoor champion, will defend his crown.

Dooley Mitchell and William Buchanan, both of Washington, D. C., who are the present indoor champions, will not compete as a team, the former not being able to take part in the tournament this year.

Edward Jacobs, sixteenth national ranking player, has filed his entry with the committee. He will team with Elmer Rudy in doubles.

Washington Well Represented.

Washington will be well represented this year. Among those who are entered are Thomas Markey, Thomas Quinn, Clayde Yeomans, Bernard Loshbough, Joseph Olhausen, Frederick Sendel, Fred Doyle, John Purlton, Joseph Rutley, Clarence Dawson, Hartley Fellows, C. C. Gill, M. G. Martinez. Two Games This Week For Mt. Rainier High

Mount Rainier, Md., Feb. 20.—Mount Rainier High School's basket ball quint winds up its season's play next week, with two games listed, one at home and one away.

The Mounts on Tuesday will travel to Damascus, Montgomery County, to face the high school court team of that place in a return game. Damascus recently defeated Mount Rainier here. The girls sextets of the schools will face in a preliminary. In a previous contest, the Montgomery County lassies also handed the local girls a drubbing.

In the season's finale Friday Woodward School, of Washington, is to be entertained on the high school court here.

Mount Rainier is bringing to a close its second court season, it having been a new school last year.

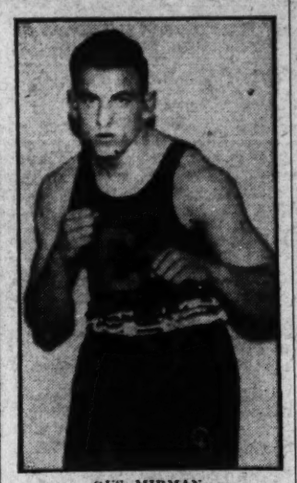
Columbus U. Boxing Team Faces S. Carolina Tonight

Watts - Russo Match Looms as Feature at Strand.



GUS MIRMAN.

ONE of the outstanding collegiate boxing attractions of the season will be offered on the stage of the Strand Theater tonight. At 8:30 o'clock glove artists of Columbus University are to throw leather at the University of South Carolina's vaunted "Gamecocks."

Coming here with one of the brightest records in the Southland, the "Gamecocks" will feature a line-up that recently registered over North Carolina State, the same team that put the University of Maryland's ringmen to rout in decisive fashion Saturday night.

Although well fortified in all classes, South Carolina will feature extraordinarily brilliant scrappers in the 126 and 135 pound divisions. Jim ("Tiger") Watts, hard-hitting lightweight, and Jim Brailsford, clever featherweight, have established themselves among the greatest battlers below the Mason-Dixon line.

Watts is considered one of the best lightweights in Dixie and stands an excellent chance of copping in the Southern intercollegiate tourney. Tossing pile drivers with both fists, he looms as a menacing opponent to hardy Gerald Russo, Dick O'Connell's dead game southpaw.

Athletic books gaining entrance to tonight's bouts and Columbus' remaining athletic schedule will be on sale at Goldie Ahearn's, corner of Ninth and E streets northwest, until 6 o'clock today, and at Vic's Sport Shop and Spalding's until noon.

ORDER OF BOUTS.

118 pounds—Eddie Marmel (Columbus) vs. Tom Scott (S. C.).
128 pounds—Mike Pardurno (Columbus) vs. Jim Brailsford (S. C.).

Miller-Roamer Nine To Meet Wednesday

The first meeting of the Miller-Roamer baseball team, runner-up to the Olmstead Grill for the senior championship of the Capital City League, last season, for the purpose of reorganizing for the 1932 campaign, will be held Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at the home of Manager Thompson, 343 Tennessee avenue, northeast.

William E. Miller, will again sponsor the nine. Several new members have been added to the roster, and any candidates desiring to try for a berth on the team are requested to report Wednesday night. A valuable addition to the club has been made in the person of Louis Mittman, who will act in the capacity of trainer for the players this year.

Saks-Griffs Battle For Title Tomorrow

The championship of Section A, of the Community Center League, will be decided tomorrow night at Eastern High School when the Griffith-Consumers clash with the Saks Clothiers. The game will get under way at 9 o'clock. The teams finished their league schedules with nine victories and one defeat each. Saks placed the only black mark on the Griffs' record last week when it trounced the Coalmen, 25-23, to tie for the honors.

The winner of the above game will play the Delaware & Hudson quintet, winner of the Section B title, a series of three games for the championship of the Community Center League and the Julius Peyser trophy. The date of the first game will be announced later.

J. C. C. Girls Defeat Brooklyn Team, 20-7

The Jewish Community Center Girls Basket Ball Team defeated the Schiff Center Girls Team, of Brooklyn, N. Y., by a score of 20 to 7, in a game played at the Center gym yesterday. The local team led from the start and was never headed. Frances Teplitz and Bess Dickens accounted for all of the winning points. Estelle Weingarten and Ethel Levine starred for the visitors.

DE MOLAY MEMBERS VISIT SHRINES TODAY

2,500 Delegates Are Expected for Fifth Pilgrimage to Washington.

Between 500 and 1,000 members of the Order of De Molay arrived in Washington last night for the fifth annual pilgrimage of the order to this city, which takes place today. About 2,500 delegates are expected in all, many of them coming to Washington this morning and leaving at the close of the pilgrimage at midnight tonight.

Frank S. Land, of Kansas City, founder and grand scribe of the order; Ernest A. Reed, grand master councilor, and Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, executive chairman, are in Washington and will participate in today's program, which has been worked out by the Robert Le Bruce Chapter, which is host, with the assistance of Frank M. Roller, adviser, and Robert D. Francis, master councilor, assisted by the following committee members: Emory Melvin Holst, Norman Sweeney, jr., Joseph M. Feigley, jr., Merritt W. Birch, William L. Taylor, Charles A. Goodman and Leon Stein.

Registration will open at McKinley High School Gymnasium this morning at 6 o'clock in order that all De Molays may be registered in time for the sightseeing trips and other amusements arranged by the committee. This afternoon at 4 o'clock they will lay a wreath on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon, and Grand Master Councilor Reed will make a short memorial address. A wreath will be placed on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington at 4 o'clock. H. L. McConnell, member of the Grand Council for Virginia, will speak. The delegates will also visit the George Washington Masonic Memorial at Alexandria.

A basket ball game and dance for the visitors, at which a number of sororities will assist, will be given tonight at McKinley High School.

Washington Train Planned by C. & O.

Newest Addition to Road's Service Will Feature Air-Cooled Cars.

George Washington, the engineer, is to be honored by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway when a new air-cooled and conditioned train will be put into service April 24, to be known as "The George Washington." There is especial significance in connection with the naming of this train, not because it is the Washington Bicentennial year, but because Washington surveyed most of the route used by this railroad to reach the Middle West.

As a young engineer, Washington surveyed the Midland Trail. When the James River Co. was organized he was the first president, and later this company was absorbed by the Richmond & Allegheny Railroad. That road became an important link in Chesapeake & Ohio development.

Work on the new air-cooled cars is progressing rapidly at the Pullman shops in Chicago. In addition to the Pullman cars there will be imperial salon cars, a luxurious library lounge and restaurant service of the finest order. In line with the Chesapeake & Ohio policy, there will be no extra fare charged on this train.

Pepper to Speak At Church Today

Episcopalian Men to Meet at Patriotic Breakfast This Morning.

Former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will speak on George Washington as a patriot and churchman at a fellowship breakfast of several hundred Episcopalian men and boys of the Capital this morning following a corporate communion under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at the Church of the Epiphany.

A number of members of Congress and other Government officials will attend the communion and breakfast.

The corporate communion will take place at 8 o'clock and the breakfast will follow in the Hall of Nations at the Hotel Washington. At the communion Bishop Freeman will officiate, assisted by the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany and chaplain of the Senate; Canon Raymond L. Wolven of Washington Cathedral and the Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's Church.

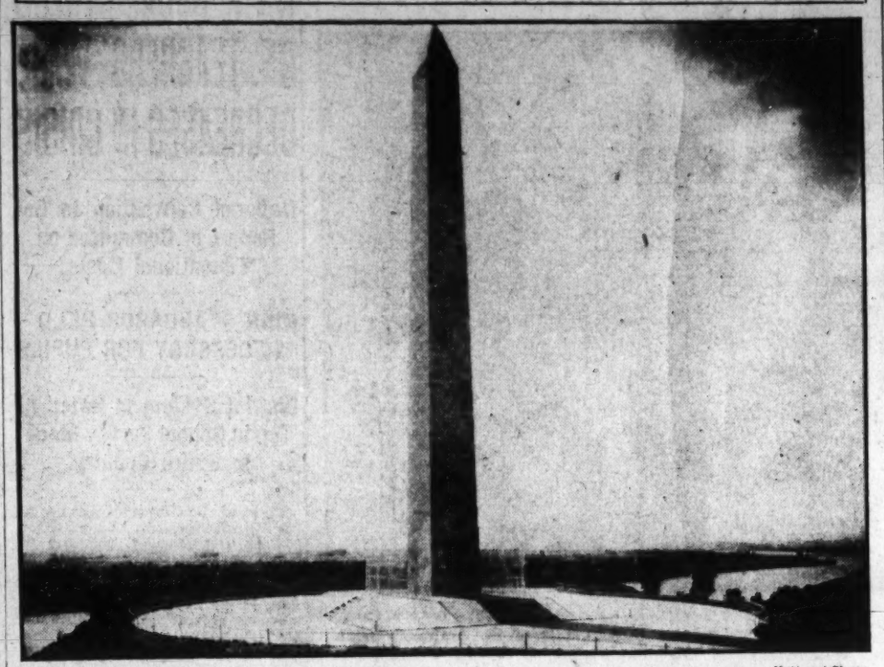
This Means Money in Your Pocket!
Open Sunday and Washington's Birthday

When Washington Was Younger—No. 201



National Photo.

THE WHOLE Nation today is celebrating the 200th birthday anniversary of George Washington. The above picture shows the Washington Monument, the memorial to this great man, as it looked when it was completed and opened to the public on December 6, 1884. Note how the river runs nearly to the base of the shaft. The cornerstone of the monument was laid with much ceremony on July 4, 1848, and construction was continued to a height of 154 feet, when work was stopped because of lack of money. Work continued suspended for several years, until finally a group of District citizens banded together and through popular subscriptions and other ways, raised $300,000, and work was resumed in 1878. The total cost of construction was $1,187,710.31, and Congress appropriated the balance after the citizens had done their bit. When the river at this point was filled in and the Mall developed, the iron fence and raised base were removed.

FOUR ARRESTS MADE IN PROBE OF MURDER OF STORE OPERATOR

One of Men Held Worked for Slain Merchant; Motive in Seizures Veiled.

INQUEST IN RUPPERT'S DEATH SET TOMORROW

Southwest Section Grocer Is Victim in Another Armed Holdup.

Four colored men were arrested yesterday and booked for investigation in connection with the fatal shooting Saturday night of Anton Ruppert at the store he had operated for 25 years at 1900 Eleventh street northwest. One of the men arrested was an employe of Ruppert.

An inquest will be held tomorrow morning at the District Morgue to determine officially the manner of Ruppert's death. The inquest was ordered by Coroner Joseph D. Rogers.

Those held are Melvin Jackson, 21, colored, of 1430 Chapin street northwest, Ruppert's errand boy, and Marvin Pearson, 22; Oliver Morgan, 22, and James R. Southall, all of 1209 U street northwest.

Connection Is Veiled.

The arrests were made by Headquarters Detective Sergts. Michael Mahaney and Thomas Sweeney. The detectives would not reveal the exact connection they thought the Negroes might have with the murder of the merchant.

Jackson told police investigating the shooting Saturday night that he was returning from a trip to the bank when the shooting of Ruppert took place.

He said he saw two colored men run from the store, going west on T street and then up Twelfth street northwest.

Another Merchant Robbed.

Held up at the point of a gun by two colored men who entered his grocery store at 51 G street southwest, shortly after 9 o'clock last night, Max Stoller, 51 years old, told police that he was compelled to lie on the floor while the men rifled his pockets and cash drawer of $20.

Stoller said he was surprised while alone in the store. As the men walked in, he said, one of them produced a gun and demanded his money. They made him lie on the floor, Stoller declared, and while the man with the gun went through his pockets, the other rifled the cash register.

Stoller said they took his wallet containing $10 and obtained the same amount from the till. They fled, he said, after a parting warnnig to "lie still."

Cab Driver Holdup Victim.

Elliot Whisonant, a cab driver of 113 W street northwest, last night reported to police that he was held up and robbed of $3.50 by a colored man who hired his taxi at Thirteenth and U streets northwest.

The man, Whisonant said, asked to be driven to Seventeenth and Swann streets northwest. When they reached their destination, he said, the man pulled a pistol from his pocket and demanded money. The man fled after warning him to kep quiet, he said.

Woman in Taxicab Hurt As 2 Machines Collide

Mrs. Betty L. Brazell, 29 years old, of 2932 Porter street northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital last night suffering from a fractured vertebrae received when the taxi in which she was a passenger was in collision with another machine at Seventeenth and L streets northwest.

Mrs. Brazell was taken to the hospital by the Fire Rescue Squad after the cab, driven by Robert A. Dugan, 39 years old, of 1606 Foxhall road northwest, was in collision with the machine of Howard Fleming, colored, 29 years old of 1609 S street northwest. No one else was injured.

Auto Driver Is Arrested In Patrol Wagon Crash

Arrested yesterday after the automobile he was driving collided with the Third Precinct patrol wagon at Twentieth and M streets northwest, Walter Henderson, colored, 22 years old, of 2604 K street northwest, was charged with having no driver's permit, failing to give the right of way and having bad brakes on his car. He was released under a bond of $150.

The patrol, driven by Private Julius Moeller, was carrying five policemen to their various beats throughout the precinct. All escaped injury and the machines were only slightly damaged.

Man Believed Visitor Injured at Capitol Plaza

Leon Birdwell, 32 years old, believed to be from out-of-town, is in Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull, received yesterday when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the Capitol Plaza.

Police say the car which struck Birdwell was driven by William Johnson, 30 years old of 703 Thirteenth street southeast. The injured man was unable to tell where he lived. His condition is undetermined.

PLAYERS TO DEPICT WASHINGTON'S LIFE

As their contribution to the George Washington celebration these pupils of St. Anthony's High School will offer two plays dealing with the life of Washington tonight, "Birthday Ball" and "He May Be President," at St. Anthony's hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast.

ADVERTISING MAN KILLED BY POISON

Physicians Unable to Save Veteran Employe of Newspaper.

A large quantity of poison last night caused the death of Ellis Gill, 40 years old, of 3614 Connecticut avenue northwest, an employe of the advertising department of the Evening Star, less than two hours after he was admitted to Garfield Hospital.

Gill was foond unconscious on the bathroom floor in his apartment by his wife, Mrs. Gladys Gill. A botttle of poison was clutched in his hand. Dr. R. L. Martin, resident physician of the apartment house, was summoned and after rendering first aid, called the Fire Rescue Squad. Gill was taken to Garfield Hospital, where physicians worked for an hour and a half in an effort to save his life. He died without regaining consciousness.

Gill's friends declared he appeared in good spirits Saturday while at work. He had been an advertising solicitor for fifteen years. Mrs. Gill said he was apparently in sound health yesterday and gave no indications of being despondent or ill.

Besides his wife, Gill is survived by a 5-year-old daughter, Barbara.

Picture Drama of Mass Seen at St. Aloysius'

The Rev. George A. Keith presented an all-color picture drama entitled "The Sacred Love Story of the Mass" last night at St. Aloysius' Church, North Capital and I streets. Over 275 mass pictures collected from various countries were used.

Father Keith will present the drama again next Sunday night at the church at 8 o'clock. He has been released from all duties by the Jesuit Provincial at the request of Archbishop Michael J. Curley, that he may devote all his time to this work.

Klansmen Light Ballston Cross

More Than 500 Members Take Part; Crowd of 1,000 Looks On.

More than 500 members of the Ballston, Va., Ku Klux Klan, No. 6, gathered at midnight last night in a huge field on the Wilson boulevard to take part in ceremonies honoring the Bicentennial of the birth of George Washington. It was estimated 1,000 persons fringed the edge of the field to witness the exercises.

A fiery cross, 70 feet tall, was lighted by Howard E. Bitting, grand tipan, shortly after midnight. A heavy downpour of rain forced the Klansmen to retreat to their hall in Ballston to conclude the ceremonies.

J. L. Barkin, grand dragon of Virginia, delivered an address in which he declared the people of today should follow the advice of George Washington in order to maintain a perfect republic. The program closed with singing of "The Old Rugged Cross," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," and "America."

Montgomery Will Stage Washington Celebration

An address by Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, on "Government: National and International" will be given tonight at 8 o'clock at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School at the Montgomery County's Bicentennial celebration of George Washington's birthday anniversary.

William Tyler Page will preside at the exercises, which will include the singing of patriotic songs, a recessional, the reading of the "Americans' Creed" by the chairman, and musical features to be rendered by the "The Mohicans," a male sextet.

Final Talk Made By Father Gindlin

Orthodox Pastor to Tour Europe Before Taking Up New York Work.

The Very Rev. Father Viachislav Gindlin, pastor of St. Alexander's Russian Orthodoox Church of Washington, preached his farewell sermon yesterday prior to his transfer to the St. Nicholas Cathedral of New York. He will make a tour of Europe before he takes up his duties with the New York church.

Father Gindlin has been the chaplain of the Jugoslavia Legation here and has worked for more than seven years to build up the local Russian center. He sponsored many balls, pageants and concerts each winter, featuring nationally known opera stars, all of the functions being liberally patronized by government officials and members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Father Gindlin has carried on other work in an attempt to effect a union of the Oriental Orthodox churches.

Bus Driver and 4 Children Are Hurt

Others Are Slightly Injured as Cars Collide at Intersection.

Four children and the driver in a bus from the Gospel Mission were injured yesterday, and occupants of another machine were slightly hurt when the two cars collided at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The injured children, passengers in the bus, were Katherine Beavers, 8 years old, and her sister, Mary, 11 years old, of 342 N street southwest, who received lacerations and bruises to the body; Bessie Varman, 8 years old, and her brother, James, 11 years old, of 639 K street northwest. They received lacerations to their heads and faces. All were treated at Emergency Hospital.

John Sherman, 21 years old, driver of the bus, suffered a sprained ankle. Occupants of the other machine, Benjamin Harris, his wife, Mrs. Grace Harris and their daughter, Betty, of 801 L street northwest, were all treated for slight bruises and cuts. The accident was termed unavoidable.

Boy Hurt as Bicycle Collides With Auto

James Arnold, 10 years old, of 2216 Nichols avenue southeast, was severely injured yesterday when the bicycle on which he was riding with a companion, Everett J. White, 12 years old, of 1220 Pleasant street southeast, collided with an automobile at Thirteenth and T streets southeast.

Young Arnold was riding on the rear of the bicycle. His companion failed to see the machine of Charles N. Mazia, 33 years old, of 713 D street southeast, until too late to avoid the accident. Both boys were thrown to the street. At Casualty Hospital it was found the Arnold boy suffered a fractured right hip. Everett escaped injury.

Attack on Woman Spurs Police Hunt

Intended Victim's Scream Puts Thug to Flight; Describes Man.

A man, who last night attacked Mrs. Louise Fox as she alighted from her automobile in the rear of the Chastleton Hotel, 1701 Sixteenth street northwest, and escaped when she screamed for help, was the object of an extensive police search early today.

Mrs. Fox told Third Precinct police that as she stepped from her car after parking it in a space in the rear of the hotel, she was grabbed from behind by a man, who attempted to drag her away. She screamed, she said, and the man fled.

Mrs. Fox said the man was well dressed in a light coat and hat. He was tall, she said, and could be easily identified.

MATERNITY MOVIE STOPPED BY KEOGH

Lecture Given With Film Is Also Ordered Modified After Complaints.

The showing of a film short dealing with maternity problems at the Smoking Palace Theater, 307 Ninth street northwest, was stopped yesterday after Assistant United States Attorney Michael F. Keogh had viewed the movie and deemed it objectionable.

Mr. Keogh, accompanied by H. G. Wanamaker, of the special vice squad at headquarters, went to see the picture after several complaints had been lodged against it.

A lecture, given in conjunction with the banned picture, was also ordered modified. Parts of it was termed unfit by Mr. Keogh.

Officials of the theater last night said the banned movie had been shown only occasionally since the feature picture had begun its run last Friday. The feature picture did not come under the disapproving eye of Mr. Keogh.

Temple Brotherhoods Hold Bicentennial Rites

Members of the executive board of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods gathered in Boston, Mass., yesterday to take part in a special celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. Allen V. de Ford represented this city.

Members of brotherhoods throughout the country attended the celebration and were entertained at a banquet by brotherhoods of the Boston congregation. A special bicentennial celebration concluded the ceremonies.

G. G. Hoover, 77, Dies at Residence

Brief Illness Is Fatal to Retired U. S. Attorney in London Hall.

George G. Hoover, retired Government attorney, died yesterday at his home in London Hall, Thirteenth and N streets northwest, following a brief illness. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Hoover for many years had been employed as an attorney in the United States Pension Office. Following his retirement in 1922, Mr. Hoover was appointed secretary of the National Association of Federal Employes. He was editor of the Annuitant, official paper of the organization.

Surviving Mr. Hoover are his widow, Mrs. Ruth C. Hoover; a son, G. Carroll Hoover, of Norristown, Pa., and a daughter, Mrs. Marcus A. Walker, of Scranton, Pa.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

N.E.A. SCORES TREND OF TEACHERS' WAGE DECREASES IN CRISIS

National Convention to Get Report of Committee on Educational Costs.

HIGH STANDARDS HELD NECESSARY FOR PUPILS

District System Is Rated at Top in School Survey Made in Entire Country.

Condemnation of the tendency to use the school system as a place for greatest retrenchment, resulting in reduction of teachers' salaries, is made in the report of the committee on school costs to be submitted this week to the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association.

The report also carries a suggested resolution for adoption by the department at its present convention, recommending that there be constituted in every State a group of citizens, including expert economists, competent school people and representative laymen, to make a careful study of the existing system of taxation.

This suggested resolution points out that "the current emergency reemphasizes the fact that the financing of public education is a responsibility which should involve the technical advice of experts in taxation, the cooperation of professional school people and the educational policy of the public."

School Finance Survey.

The resolution also urges "that since a comprehensive national study of school finance is under way, under the direction of the United States office of education, the utmost cooperation should exist between such groups as may be established in the several States and the national survey of school finance."

Observation is made in the report that "curtailment in the amounts to be expended for school purposes is an action to be taken only after the most careful study by those who are professionally qualified to pass judgment upon matters of such vital importance to the community."

"If the Nation expects to secure progressively better equipped teachers for its children it must not consent to a reduction of teachers' salaries," the report states. "Retrenchment in teachers' salaries tends ultimately to retain the poorest teachers and to drive the best teachers into other careers."

District Favorably Reported.

In a survey of all States, the District of Columbia is given one of the most flattering comments in the report. It is shown that salaries of educational employes are being maintained in accordance with the salary schedule during the present school year.

"The largest program of schoolhouse construction ever provided by Congress is being carried out during the school year 1931-32," the report states. This represents an expenditure of approximately $7,500,000 worth of school buildings.

"This economic depression and unemployment are affecting the financial status of public education in two general ways," the report says. "The responsibilities of the schools have been greatly increased and the financial resources of the schools have been greatly reduced. The solution calls for careful research, clear thinking and cooperative action by all groups, both within and without the profession. Intelligent economy, which means getting the maximum return for every dollar spent, should characterize the school program both in prosperous and adverse times."

High Standards Supported.

Hope that a plan will be formulated at the convention of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, now in session in Washington, for maintaining the present high standards of education "until the return of prosperity makes the support of the schools no longer difficult," was expressed by Dr. Edwin C. Broome, superintendent of schools of Philadelphia, in a radio address last night over Station WRC.

"Those who are in charge of the schools recognize, as do all other leaders, that the present economic situation is temporary," Dr. Broome said. "No one wishes children to suffer because of conditions for which they are not to blame. Citizens in every community are cooperating with school officials in efforts to save the schools from serious permanent injury."

Equaling the present financial emergency in significance to the school heads is the report on the commission on character education which will be made at the general session of the department this morning, Dr. Broome told his radio audience.

Dr. Cooper Speaks.

Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, who also spoke on the radio program, declared that business men need an education which will lead them to attack their problems in a scientific manner.

"If American business and American capitalism are to survive Russian bolshevism and thereby keep American individual liberty from falling before a dictatorship, such as exists in Russia, it will be through changing the attitude of business from self-interest and the accumulation of money as a measure of personal success, to an attitude of social service in which capital and labor work together for the good of the entire Nation. Only through education can we expect that the coming generation will recognize and maintain such standards of economic and civic prosperity."

Capital Girl in Play Cast.

Miss Amy L. Veerhoff, 604 Aspen street, will play one of the leading parts in "Step This Way," a musical comedy to be presented here by students of Northwestern University March 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12. More than 100 will be in the cast. This will be the fourth annual musical comedy to be presented under the joint auspices of the Women's Athletic Association and the Men's Union of Northwestern University.

CATHEDRAL GETS FINE BOOK

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington (right), yesterday received a valuable book presented to the Washington Cathedral by Mrs. Beatrice Fox Griffith, of Philadelphia. It is being given the bishop by the Rev. G. Freeland Peter, chancellor of the cathedral and custodian of its library.

SAPPHIRE-STUDDED BOOK GIVEN BISHOP

Pennsylvania Committee of Washington Cathedral Presents "Sermon."

Designed and hand lettered after the style of the Middle Ages by American craftsmen, a beautiful illuminated book with a gold-embossed binding studded with sapphires, containing the "Sermon on the Mount" was presented yesterday to the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, as a gift to Washington Cathedral.

The presentation was made following the people's evensong service in the Crypt Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. The book was given through the Pennsylvania committee for Washington Cathedral by Mrs. Beatrice Fox Griffith, of Philadelphia, in memory of her father, the late Dr. L. Webster Fox, prominent opthalmologist of that city, who was especially well known for his eye surgery work among Indians. Five American craftsmen, Albert Oldach, Lucy Teyman Rockwell, Eleanor Lane and Mrs. Griffith, all of Philadelphia, and Edward Oakes, of Boston, gave their services in the preparation of the book. Mrs. Charles Lea, of Devon, is chairman of the sponsoring Pennsylvania committee interested in the completion of the cathedral.

One of the first manuscripts of its kind ever made in this country, the gift to the cathedral was adapted in design from famous illuminated books, fashioned for Westminster Abbey, Peterborough, Winchester and other cathedrals in England in the thirteenth century. It was prepared by the group of craftsmen after months of research in the Morgan Library in New York, the Pennsylvania Museum, and other large libraries. Mrs. Griffith worked more than five years on the illuminated work.

The book consists of 41 pages of vellum parchment, on which are written in illuminated letters of raised gold and black the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of St. Matthew's Gospel, dealing with the Sermon on the Mount. The borders of the pages are illustrated with symbols of the Church, famous stained glass windows and leading designs of English Gothic architecture, all hand-painted, carrying out the jewel colors of gold and sapphire. The cover of the book has a gold cross in its center and four gold bosses, set with blue star sapphires. The central jewel was presented by the Rev. Glenn T. Morse, of West Newbury, Mass., who came to Washington for the ceremony attending the placing of the volume in the Cathedral archives for all time. Others present, in addition to the donor, Mrs. Griffith, were her husband, Charles S. Griffith, and her mother, Mrs. L. Webster Fox, all of Philadelphia.

In accepting the gift Bishop Freeman felicitated Mrs. Griffith and her fellow craftsmen on having done their creative work in the same spirit in which the Cathedral is being erected and prepared for public worship.

Bicentennial Visitor Hurt When Hit by Automobile

Mrs. Rebecca Green, 45 years old, who came to Washington from Boston, Mass., for the George Washington Bicentennial Celebration, is in an undetermined condition in Casualty Hospital, suffering from severe injuries received last night when she was knocked down by an automobile while crossing Union Station Plaza with her husband, Louis Green.

According to police, Mrs. Green was struck by the machine of William McCallam, 20 years old, of 1147 Fourth street northeast. The couple was crossing the plaza near Columbus monument, it was said, when McCallam's car struck Mrs. Green. Her right leg was broken and she received possible internal injuries. Her husband escaped by leaping to the sidewalk. McCallam was not held.

M'CARTNEY URGES TURN TO SPIRITUAL

America Lost Sight of Dream in Money Worship, Pastor Says.

"Our dream for the salvation of the common man can never come true until we learn to place Jesus Christ in his rightful place in our national and individual life," said Dr. Albert Joseph McCartny, preaching yesterday at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

"By the settlement of Jamestown in 1607, the English stock had been grafted on the American continent. Economic conditions in England were very bad. The New World had been painted for them in glowing colors. Those who had lost fortunes or were sinking in the social or economic scale were turned toward America as a land of refuge and hope. Thus away beyond the sea the American dream was beginning to take form in the hearts of men.

"In the land where everyone owned his own ground, labor was scarce, and the colonists tried to solve their problems with Negro slaves. Economic forces pushed back the immigrants to form the new frontier. The free consent of all has been embedded in the average man as an essential part of the American dream. The frontier spirit was developed. Something was happening to the American dream. Thus the very wilderness itself contributed to the American spirit of democracy. Thus it expressed itself in language familiar to every schoolboy. At last the American dream had become vocal.

Economic Structure Shaken.

"War is always and everywhere demoralizing in its effects, no matter how worthy the cause. A period of inflation, profiteering and unscrupulous opulence followed the achievement of independence that placed a big question mark behind the capacity of the common man to govern himself. There was no central government, nothing but the mere empty shell of a loose Nation. The whole economic life of the Nation had been severely shaken. Even Washington himself began to have his misgivings about democracy. The dream seemed to be vanishing.

"But it was the very size of the country itself that was to save it to democracy. It was on frontier after frontier of this vast domain that the American dream could be prolonged until it became a part of the structure of the American mind, all for each and each for all.

Not Through With Dream.

"But as America grew she tried to serve both God and mammon. Money began to count for more in American life.

"We are not through with America's dream, for where there is no vision the people perish. If the American dream is ever to come true and abide with us, it will be when we face ourselves toward God. We have all been facing toward Mammon, kneeling at the shrine of success," Dr. McCartney concluded.

Man Walks Into Car; Suffers Broken Ankle

Bally Alert, 38 years old, of 1514 Potomac avenue southeast, is in Casualty Hospital with a fractured ankle, received last night when he is said to have walked into the side of a moving automobile at Thirteenth and C streets southeast.

As Alert stepped from the curb he struck the side of an automobile driven by Robert Smith, colored, of 135 Hicklin street southeast. The impact threw him to the ground, breaking his ankle.

Bullet Sends Man to Hospital.

James L. Butler, colored, 27 years old, of 927 F street southwest, is in critical condition at Emergency Hospital with a bullet wound in his neck. Police said he was shot by another Negro during an altercation early yesterday morning.

WASHINGTON TRAITS HELD TO PROVE HIS RELIGIOUS IMPULSE

Speaker on Catholic Radio Hour Analyzes Elements of His Greatness.

CYNICISM OF PRESENT SHARPLY CONTRASTED

Dr. Cartwright Holds First President Knew Power of Character.

"In the various estimates made of Washington's contribution to the war for independence and to the founding of the American Nation there is a marvelous harmony in the opinion that his central qualification was his character," said Dr. John Keating Cartwright, speaking yesterday on the Washington Catholic radio hour, broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Dr. Cartwright's topic was, "Belief in Immortality and Citizenship." He said:

"We have read in the press recently about the alarm which is felt in England over the wide spread of cynicism and despair. There is a growing tendency for the ordinary man to be content with the dole and for the man of property to be satisfied with his diminishing returns. A general lassitude seems to be replacing the desire for improvement which has hitherto maintained one of the most splendid forms of the world's civilization. A determined effort through what is called the youth movement is being made so as to reawaken enthusiasm and an interest in the country's welfare.

Root of Good Citizenship.

"But this is just one concrete instance of what might have been foretold in principle long ago. The radical cause is the deepening conviction that life is not worth while which in many minds replaces the religious persuasion of immortality. Two generations ago one of the world's most famous unbelievers said: 'The day in which the belief in an after-life shall vanish from the earth will witness a terrific moral and spiritual decadence.' Some of us perhaps might do without it, provided only that others held fast. But there is no lever capable of raising an entire people if once they have lost their faith in the immortality of the soul.'

"Belief in immortality, Christianity's bright promise to the world, is the chief consolation to the individual for the ills of life. It is more—it is the root of good citizenship. For in order that a nation may exist it must be made up of individuals who have not merely life and the pursuit of happiness as their objective, but who possess characters made up of certain indispensable virtues. There must be truth, decency, honor, charity.

Knew Necessity of Religion.

"But the practice of these virtues is often costly to the individual. He will not practice them therefore on a consistent scale just because society needs them. The idea that honesty is the best policy will not be sufficient in a case where it is evidently going to cost him a great sacrifice. Nothing will suffice for the consistent practice of these virtues except a belief in their absolute value, independent of all social considerations—that is to say a belief that these virtues are desired of us by an All-Good and Eternal Being who will reward them in a life to come.

"It is this conviction held, cherished and pursued in its ordinary forms that makes good citizens. It is this conviction held with extraordinary intensity and practiced rigorously that makes heroes. Such a one was Washington. That he was convinced of the necessity of religion is clear from many of his statements. One of the most striking is the following: 'Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, those firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them.

Honored Also as Christian.

"'A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it be simply asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.'

"In this theoretical estimate, then, Washington disagreed with the skeptic. But he did more. He followed the principle into act.

"Both in war and peace he was a man of great and sound talent and constructive powers. He was a sagacious observer, a resourceful administrator, a wise statesman. Yet in any of these qualities he was perhaps surpassed by several of the other generals and founders. In one thing he was unsurpassed and unequaled—in virtue and character. His contemporaries recognized it in their selection of him for supreme commander and in their support of him during times of trial and darkness. In the bitter political contests that raged on the floor of the Constitutional Convention it was his majestic presence that reconciled them and that stood always forth as the symbol of what was mutual in their desires. In the century and a half during which he has been venerated is the Father of His Country, millions of Americans have honored in him not only the successful captain and the wise politician but the Christian gentlemen.

Thieves Get $50 Diamond Pin.

Robert E. Smith, of 743 Varnum street northwest, last night reported to police that his home had been entered by thieves, who after ransacking the place, fled with a diamond pin valued at $50. He said entrance was gained through a first-floor window, which had been left unlocked.

Cigarettes Loot of Robbers When Safe Resists Them

When your safe-cracking plans go astray, be nonchalant—pick up several packages of cigarettes and make a hasty retreat.

That, it seems, is the policy of robbers, who early yesterday broke their way into a Sanitary Grocery Store at 614 I street northwest, and made a futile attempt to open a safe.

The break was reported to police yesterday by Howard L. McFall, manager of the store. He said the intruders forced an iron bar on a rear window, smashed the glass, and, after gaining entrance, tried to pry the door from an office safe.

Whether they were frightened or gave the job up as hopeless, was not determined. Mr. McFall said cigarettes, valued at about $3, were missing.

Yudelevit Again Is Sought In New Shooting Incident

Harry Yudelevit, 32 years old, who had some trouble giving himself up to police recently when he was wanted for questioning in connection with the shooting of Harry Abrams as he sat in an automobile in front of 1620 Buchanan street northwest, is again the object of a police search. This time he is wanted for questioning in connection with the shooting of Private Thomas D. Bacon, of the First Precinct.

Private Bacon was shot in the leg when he investigated the contents of an automobile parked on E street between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest. Two men, both said to have been armed, attacked the investigating policeman.

John Kendrick, 37 years old, said by police to have escaped from the New Jersey State Prison farm at Bordentown, was subdued by Bacon and taken to the First Precinct station. His companion escaped. Barbara Lee, who said she married Kendrick under the name of Lee four years ago, is also being held in the case.
